

A skier and her mountain dog friend are delighting Facebook users with a video of their exploits on the SHARE Y \sim ...

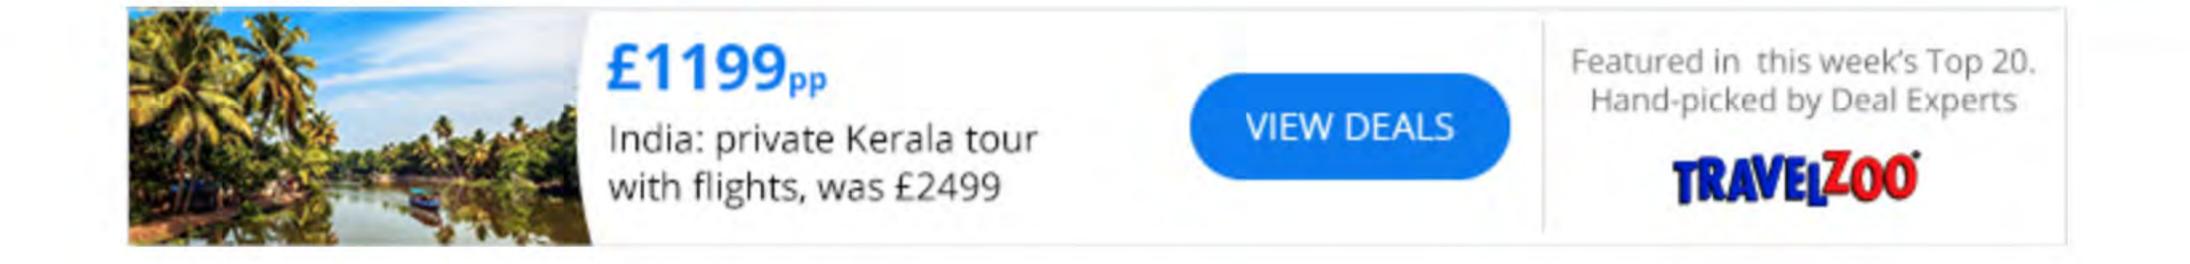

> 10:51

News Headlines:

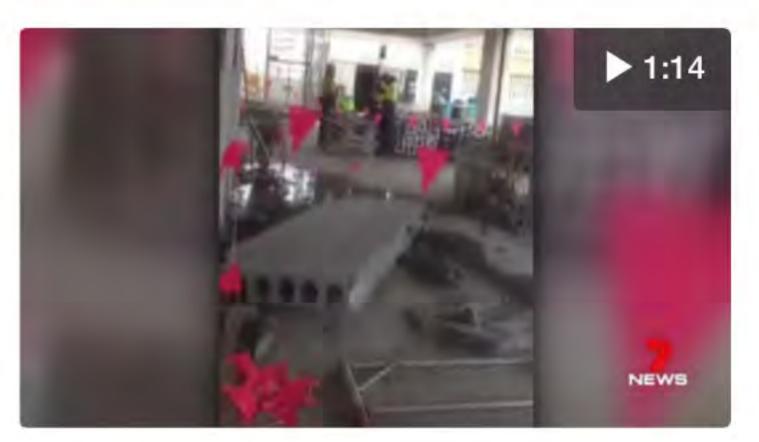

slopes.

Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in Tignes in the French Alps.

Almost every day, Bernese mountain dog Islys appears at her front door and barks to let Squash know she is ready to go.

LATEST

Tradies' narrow escape from falling concrete slab

you started

AF Motorspor... Sponsored

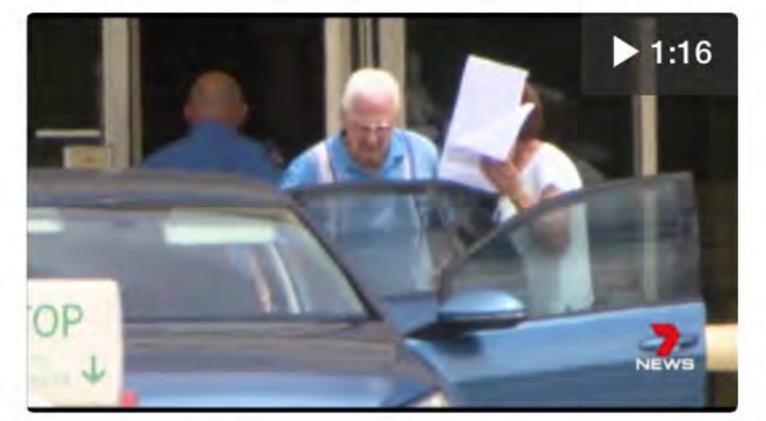

Motorsport - Top tips to get Social media helps war vet in Stolen ashes returned to wheelchair watch Eagles game grateful Perth family

Perth snakebite victim was expecting baby girl

Elderly man accused of murdering wife 'wanted to put her out of her misery'

Everything you need to know about smart tech home

Amazon Sponsored

Mayor blames GOLDOC for sand dunes fiasco

FEATURED

Baby found abandoned at airport with heartbreaking note

Exchange Rates: What You Should Know

Yahoo! Search Sponsored

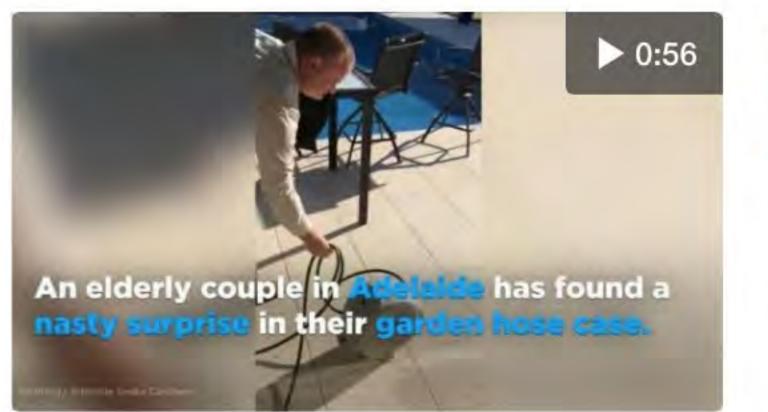

Moment world's most powerful rocket blasts into space

Aussie mum returns from Vietnam holiday with hookworm

Fish left flapping on supermarket floor after aquarium breaks

The deadly reason why garden hose wouldn't retract

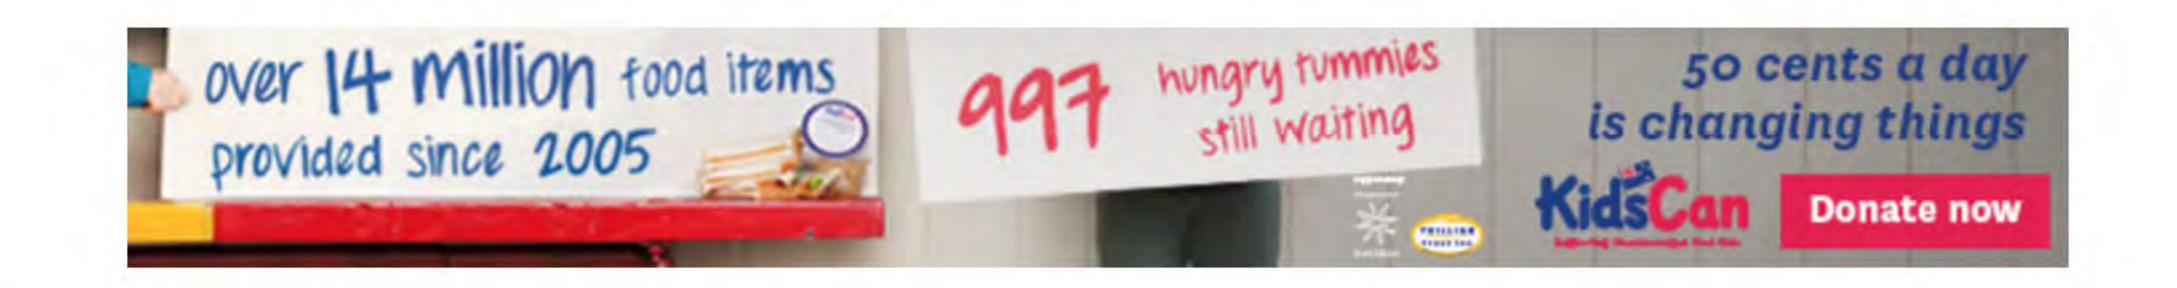

15 New Cars To Avoid At All Costs

Forbes Sponsored

Youths attack 7 News cameraman in vicious daylight attack

FEEDBACK

Lifestyle Finance News ΤV Weather Sport Entertainment Travel

© 1996 - 2018 Yahoo!7 Privacy Advertising Yahoo News Legal Help

Belfast Telegraph DIGITAL

Y (8+

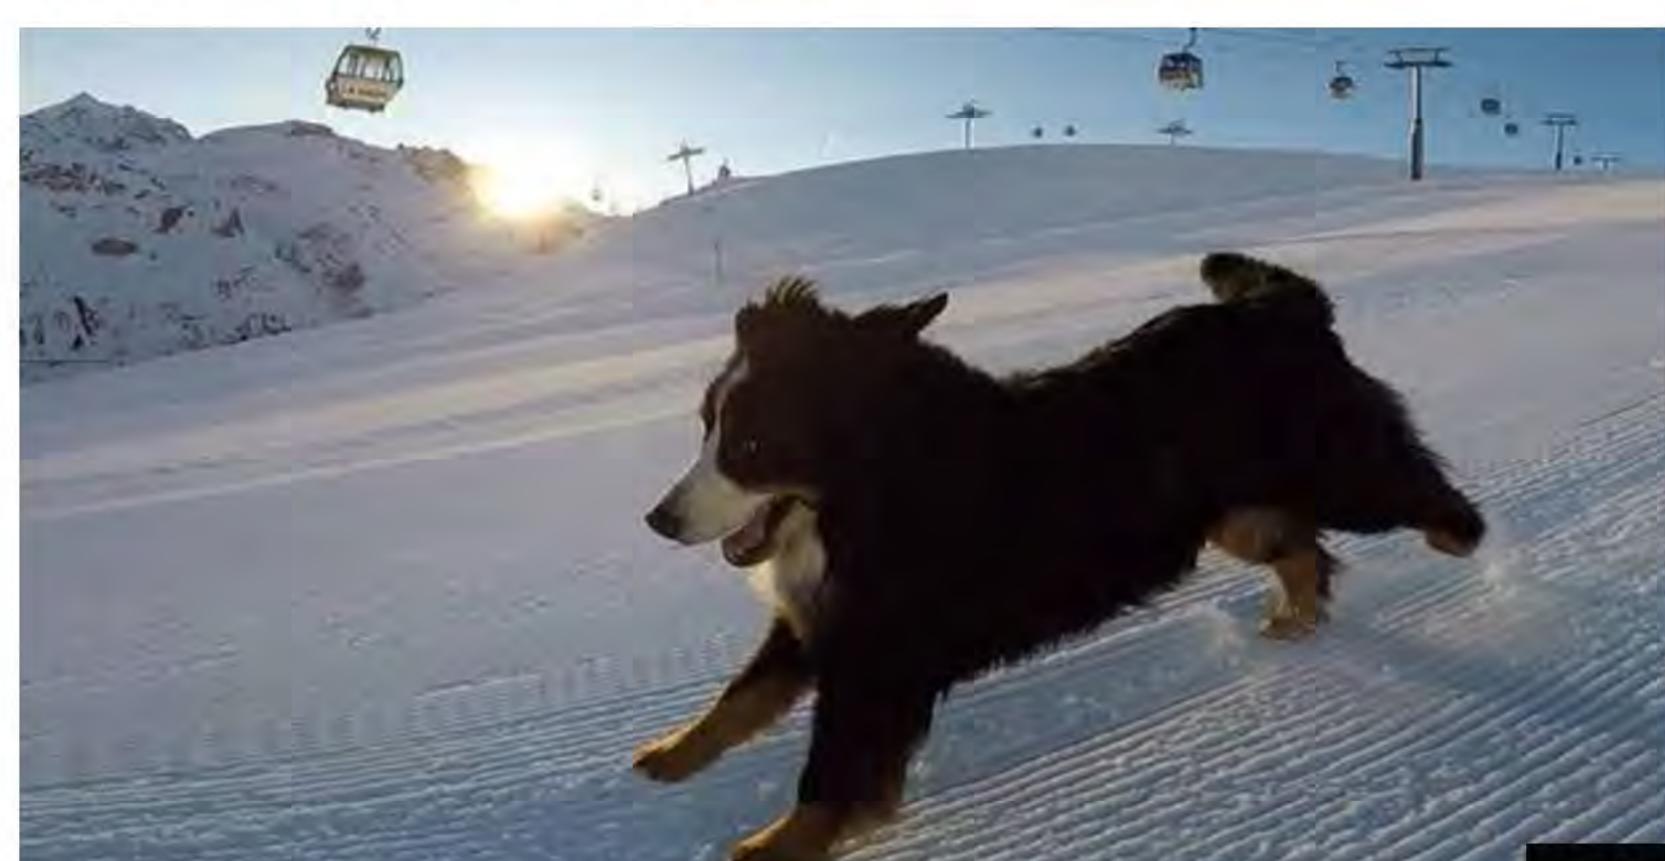

Q

HOME NEWS SPORT BUSINESS ENTERTAINMENT LIFE CARS OPINION TRAVEL VIDEO ARCHIVE EVENTS

Home > News > Viral

Meet the professional adventurer who shares her morning ski trips with a Bernese mountain dog

This is inspiring in so many ways.

Daily News Headlines Newsletter

Today's news headlines, directly to your inbox.

Email address

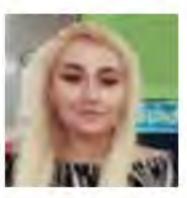

Sign Up

Popular

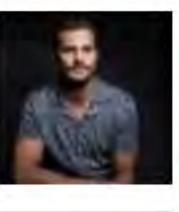

Watch: PSNI reviewing footage after ugly scenes in Belfast as BBC NI man tries to... Northern Ireland

Death of young mum Aine Gribben leaves Tyrone family heartbroken Northern Ireland

Jamie Dornan: Mum's death was horrendous and you are never over it News

Manchester United star Alexis Sanchez handed 16 month prison sentence Manchester United

1 Q

 $(\mathbf{\Sigma})$

(G+)

DUP's Arlene Foster against pardon for suffragettes who broke law Northern Ireland

January 31 2018

(Squash Falconer/PA)

A skier and her mountain dog friend are delighting Facebook users with a video of their exploits on the slopes.

Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in Tignes in the French Alps.

Almost every day, Bernese mountain dog Islys appears at her front door and barks to let Squash know she is ready to go.

The pair then trudge up the pistes, gaining 600 metres in height. Once that's done, it's time for the fun part – a swift run down the mountain, with Islys chasing Squash all the way down.

Related content

Islys belongs to Squash's best friend and neighbour, but spends a lot of time with her adventure partner.

Although she's very friendly, Squash is aware that Islys' presence may not be welcomed by all skiers, so she gets up extremely early to use the pistes while they are empty.

"I get up early in the morning before the lifts open because she's very enthusiastic and she has a tendency to leap around and want to play with skiers and tear around after them," she said.

.CO.UK and .UK 1st year FREE*

*Requires 2 year purchase

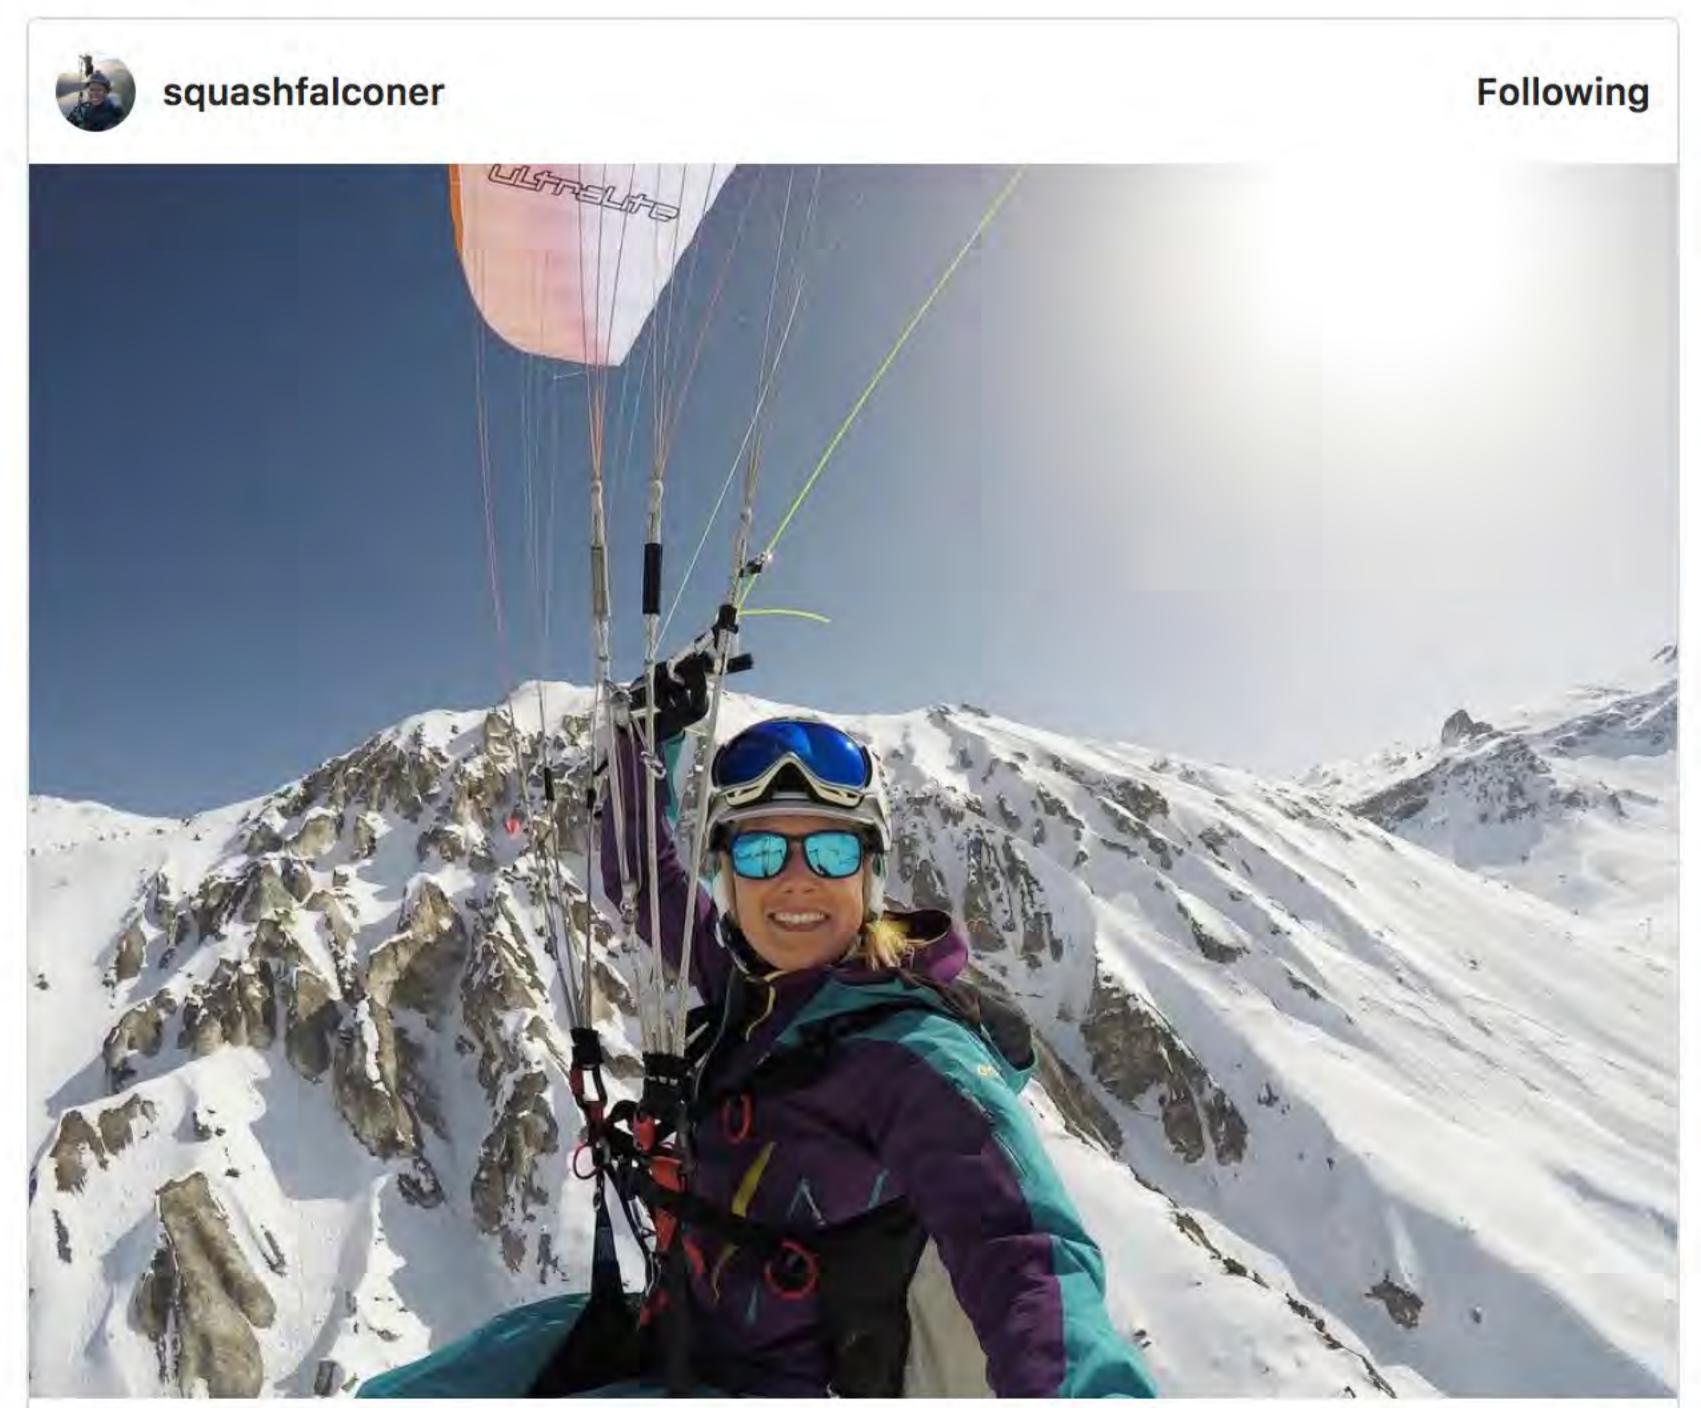

"It's quite intimidating for a lot of people and you can't sort of have a dog roaming around."

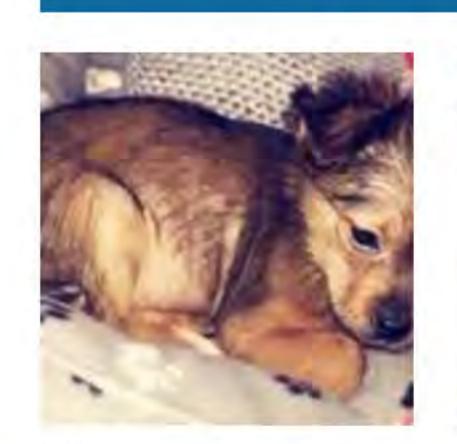

Squash may have to bring a set of gear with her on their adventures, but Islys is perfectly equipped with her woolly coat and long claws to grip the snow.

Related content

Squash shares videos and photos of her adventures with Islys and her myriad other activities like paragliding, motorbiking and mountain climbing on her Facebook page, but the dog always gets the biggest response from fans.

"I do certain projects and things for sponsors and I work really hard on my social media," she said. "But I put a picture of the dog up and it just does better than anything!"

NI 'puppy hit with hammer and microwaved'

'Brilliant' Frasier star John Mahoney dies aged 77

Nightlife Galleries

274 likes

squashfalconer Monday in the mountains 🤌 - - - - @tignesofficiel @salomonfreeski @gopro @ozoneparagliders @suunto #paragliderpilot #hero5 #tignes #tignesaddict #mountaingirl #adventurer #adventurewomen #squashfalconer #suuntocore #pxhero4life

view all 11 comments

11 MONTHS AGO

That's not to say that Squash's other posts are boring, however.

She has climbed Mount Everest and Kilimanjaro, climbed and then flown a paraglider off Mont Blanc (the first British woman to do so) and motorcycled in Baja California, Mexico.

She makes her living from sponsorship and public speaking, inspiring others to seek out their adventurous sides.

 Nightlife: Dsqo at Filthy

 McNastys, Belfast - February, 1

 2018 [Photos]

 Nightlife: Bot Wednesdays'

 Belfast - January 31 2018

 Photos]

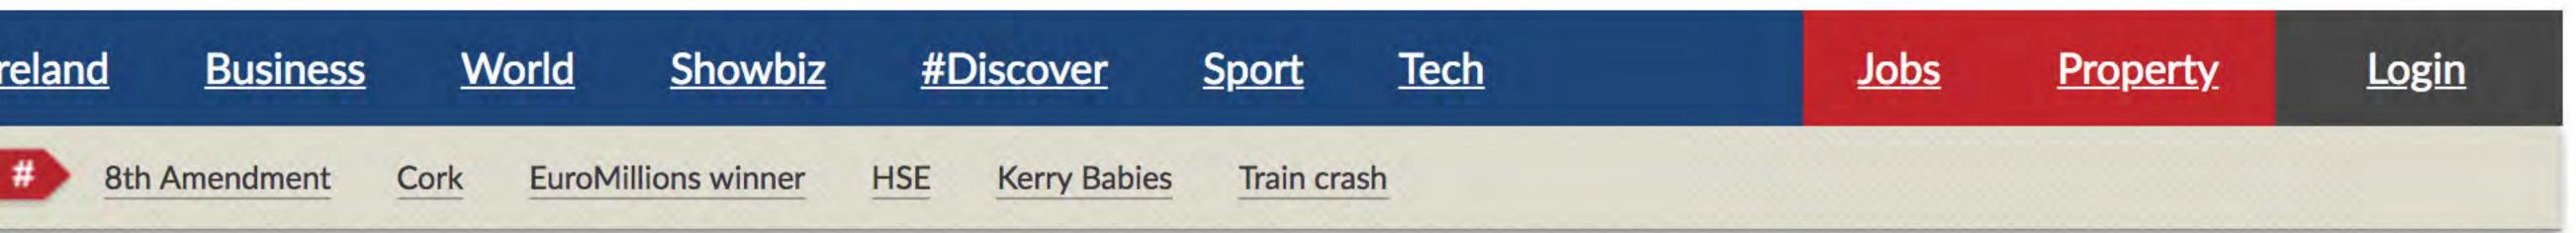

From The Web

0)

Sponsored Links

Meet the professional adventurer who shares her morning ski trips with a Bernese mountain dog

f 0 💟 8 🕂 🤧

PREVIOUS NEXT

31/01/2018 - 17:49:00

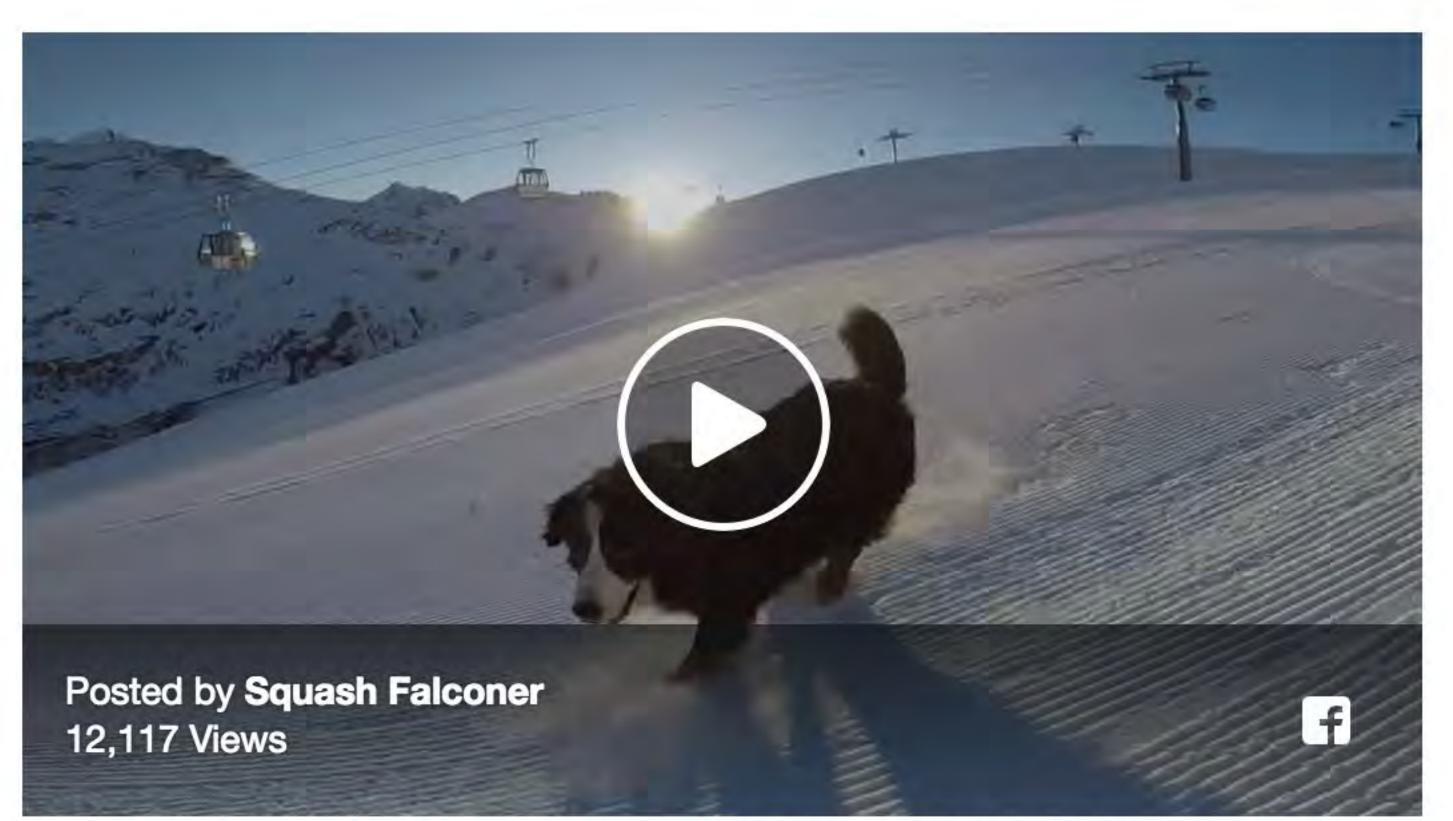

Back to Discover Home

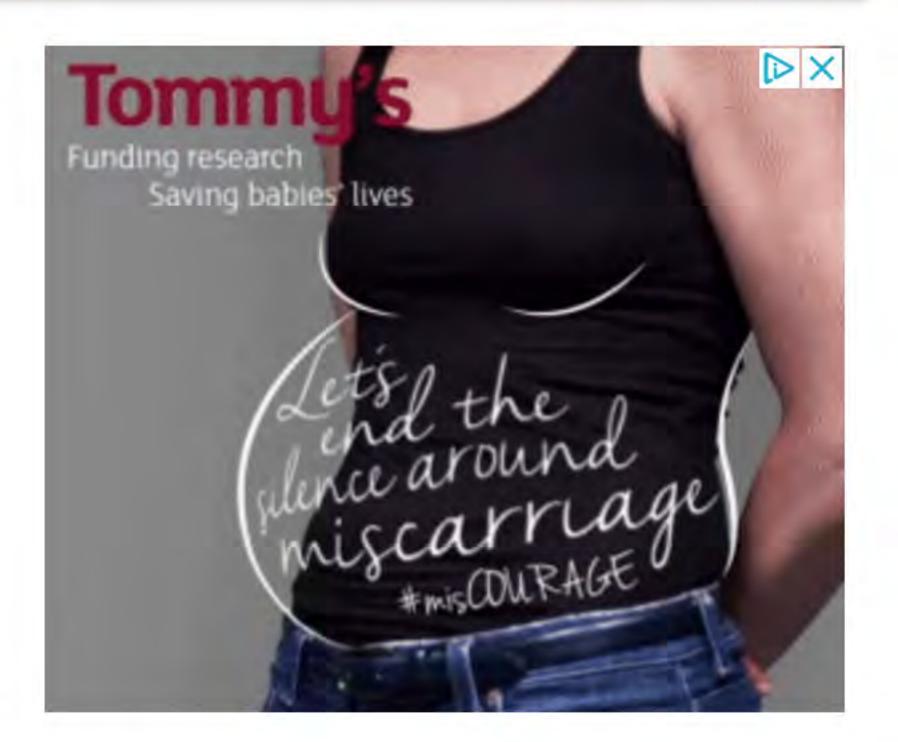

A skier and her mountain dog friend are delighting Facebook users with a video of their exploits on the slopes.

Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in Tignes in the French Alps.

Almost every day, Bernese mountain dog Islys appears at her front door and barks to let Squash know she is ready to go.

The pair then trudge up the pistes, gaining 600 metres in height. Once that's done, it's time for the fun part – a swift run down the mountain, with Islys chasing Squash all the way down.

"Any men left holding the bags can have a pint on us, while the other half spends the hard-earned cash!"

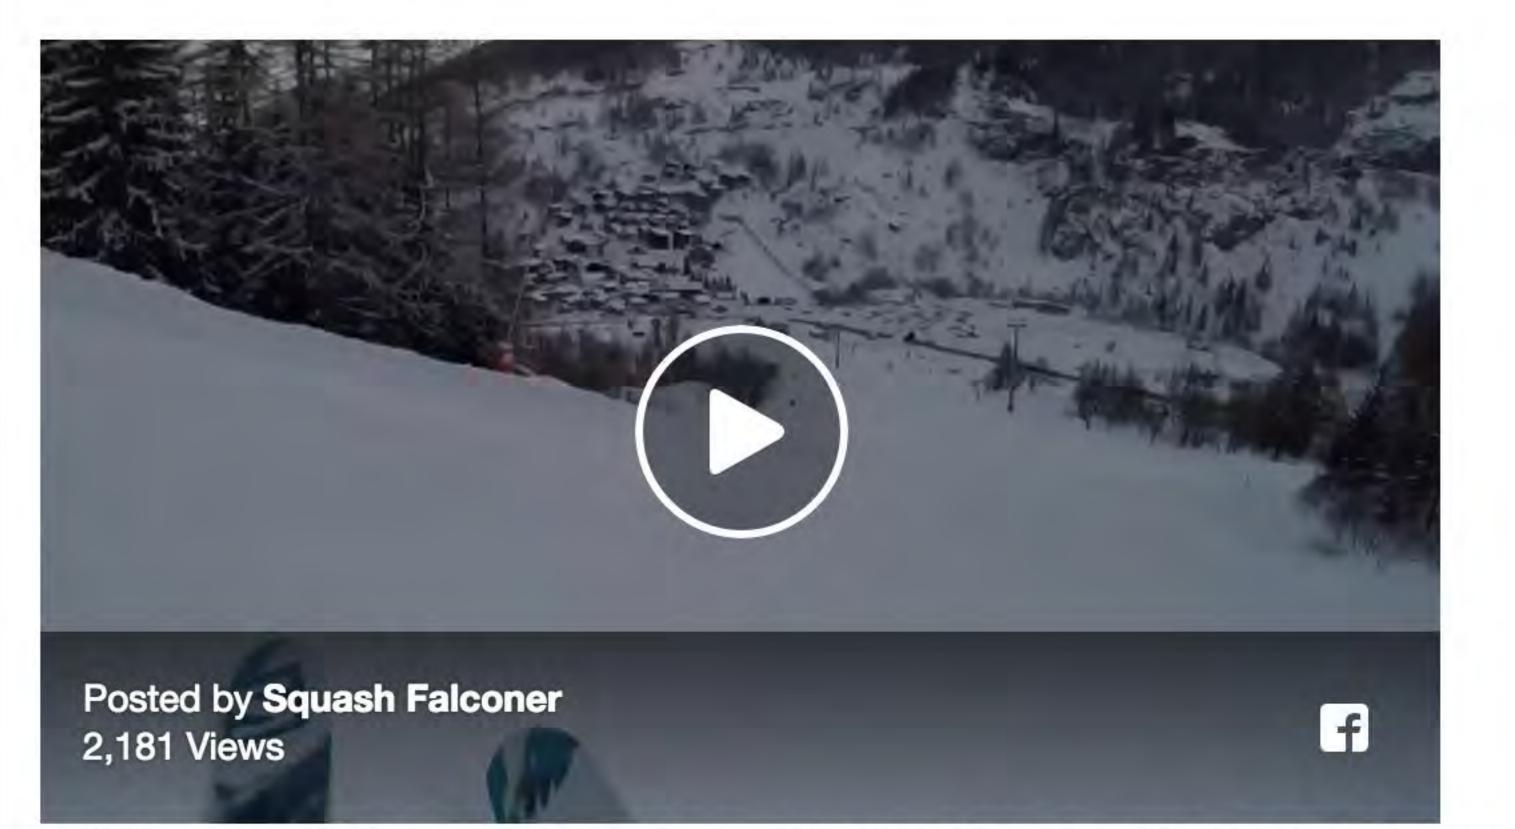

Islys belongs to Squash's best friend and neighbour, but spends a lot of time with her adventure partner.

Although she's very friendly, Squash is aware that Islys' presence may not be welcomed by all skiers, so she gets up extremely early to use the pistes while they are empty.

"I get up early in the morning before the lifts open because she's very enthusiastic and she has a tendency to leap around and want to play with skiers and tear around after them," she said.

"It's quite intimidating for a lot of people and you can't sort of have a dog roaming around."

Squash may have to bring a set of gear with her on their adventures, but Islys is perfectly equipped with her woolly coat and long claws to grip the snow.

Video: This London house is less than 8ft wide but will set you back an eyewatering £1m

It might be thin but it still has four bedrooms.

Want to get an idea of quality the first time you visit a restaurant? Here's what to order

Never worry about what to order again.

'We wouldn't piss on them if they were on fire': Horslips slam conference for song usage

Rock band Horslips have hit out at the organisers of the Irexit conference for using their hit Dearg Doom as a soundtrack without permission.

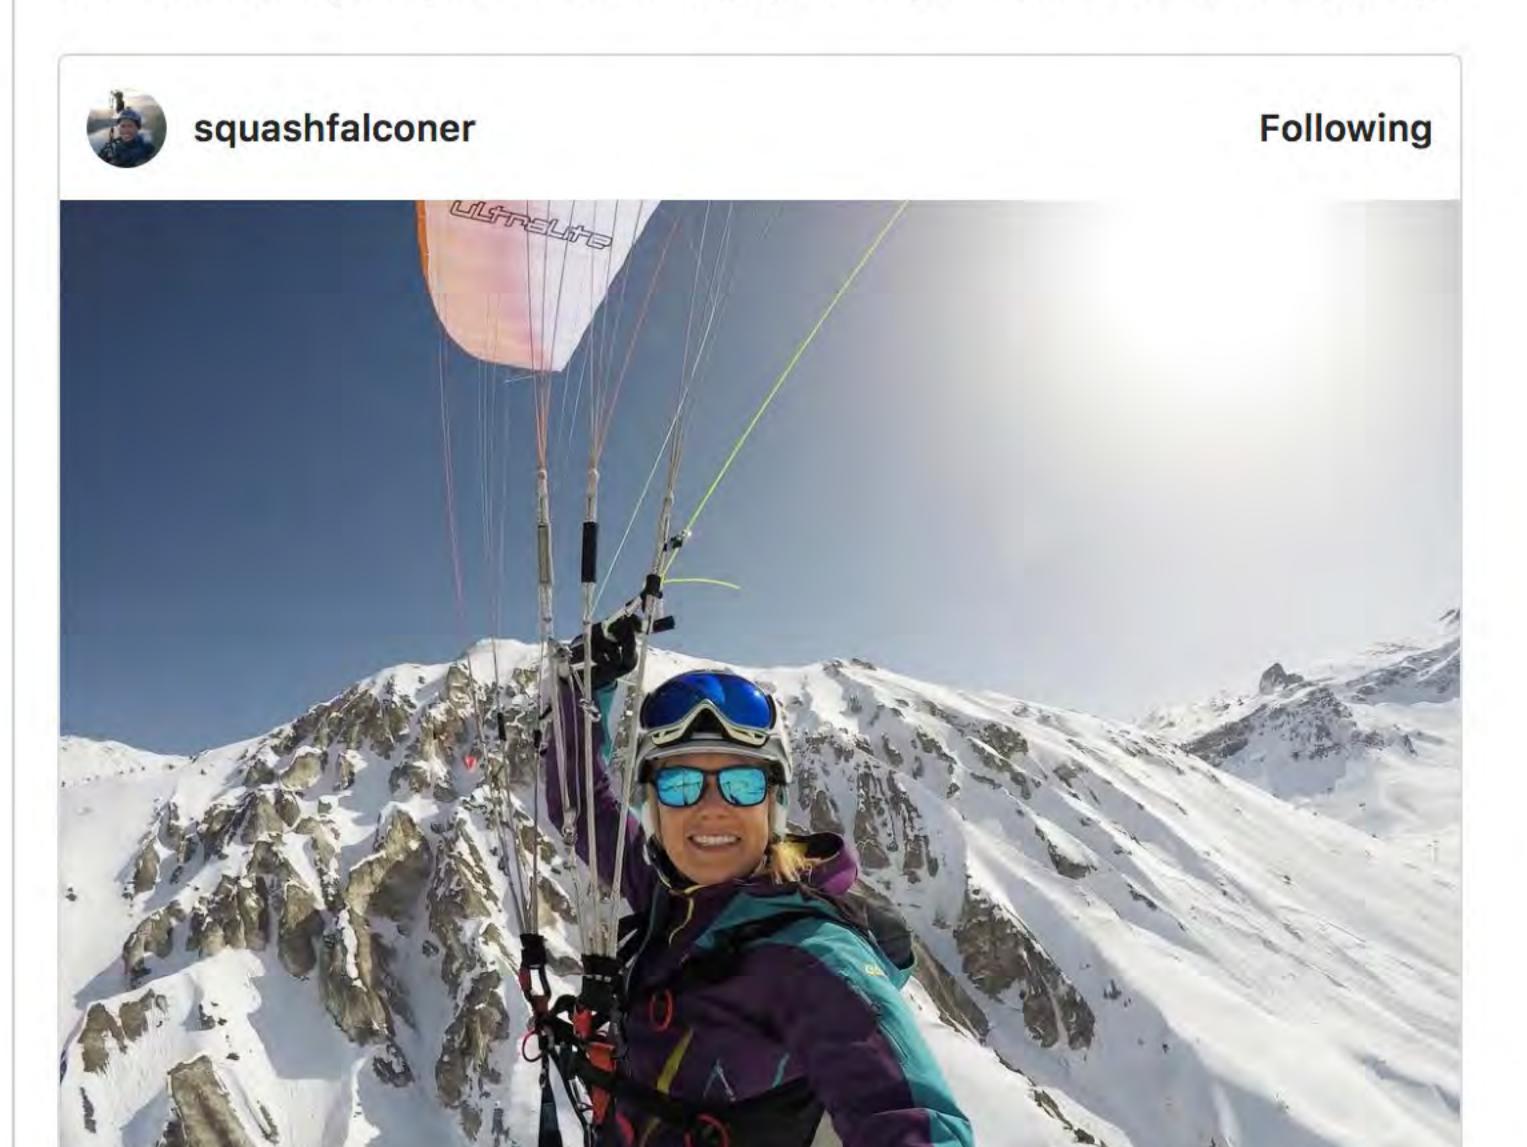

'Lady-friendly' crisps are a thing now – and the internet isn't too happy about it

You can basically hear everyone's eyes rolling.

Squash shares videos and photos of her adventures with Islys and her myriad other activities like paragliding, motorbiking and mountain climbing on her Facebook page, but the dog always gets the biggest response from fans.

"I do certain projects and things for sponsors and I work really hard on my social media," she said. "But I put a picture of the dog up and it just does better than anything!"

This is the surprising thing that happens if you vape at the side of a motorway

You'll want to watch this video on a loop.

10 hilariously unfortunate email typos

"Good Afterboob."

Absolute chaos as Eagles fans swoop onto streets of Philadelphia

 $\square X$

What started off as fun and friendly celebrations, have now taken a turn for the worst!

DOWNLOAD OUR APP

Saving bables lives

Tomn

Funding research

274 likes

squashfalconer Monday in the mountains 👌 - - - - @tignesofficiel @salomonfreeski @gopro @ozoneparagliders @suunto #paragliderpilot #hero5 #tignes #tignesaddict #mountaingirl #adventurer #adventurewomen #squashfalconer #suuntocore #pxhero4life

view all 11 comments

11 MONTHS AGO

That's not to say that Squash's other posts are boring, however.

She has climbed Mount Everest and Kilimanjaro, climbed and then flown a paraglider off Mont Blanc (the first British woman to do so) and motorcycled in Baja California, Mexico.

She makes her living from sponsorship and public speaking, inspiring others to seek out their adventurous sides.

KEYWORDS: Viral, Animals, Adventure, Dog, UK, Featured, Burmese mountain dog, Islys, Squash Falconer, Tignes, story-enriched, composite

SEND US STUFF Like 483K

Sollow @breakingnewsie

← PREVIOUS NEXT →

GO

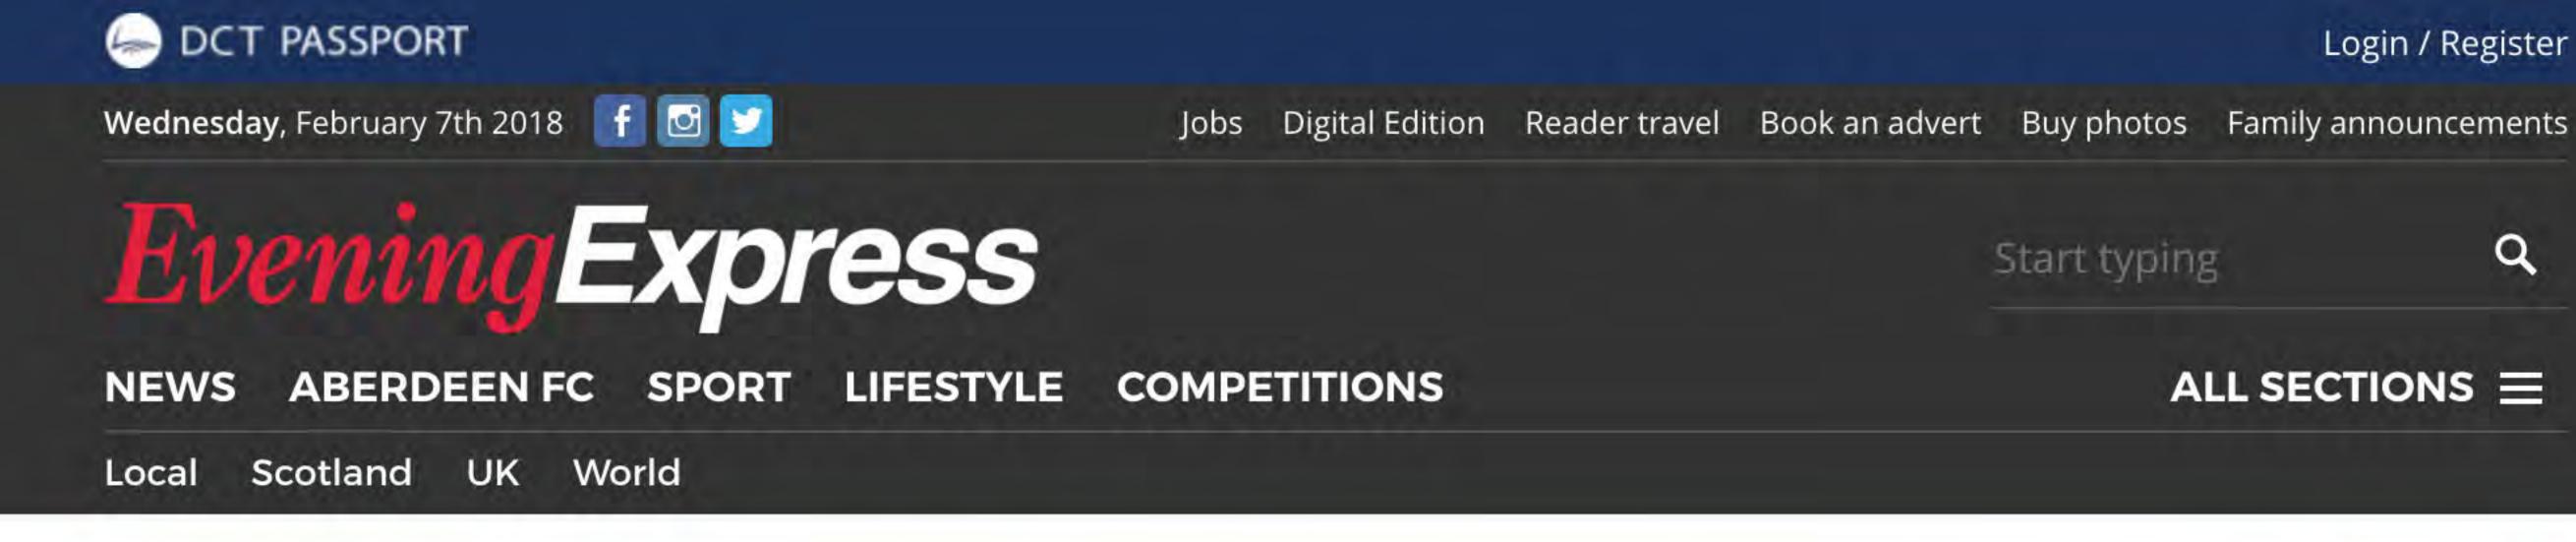

L

0)

Want us to email you the top news stories each lunchtime?

Email

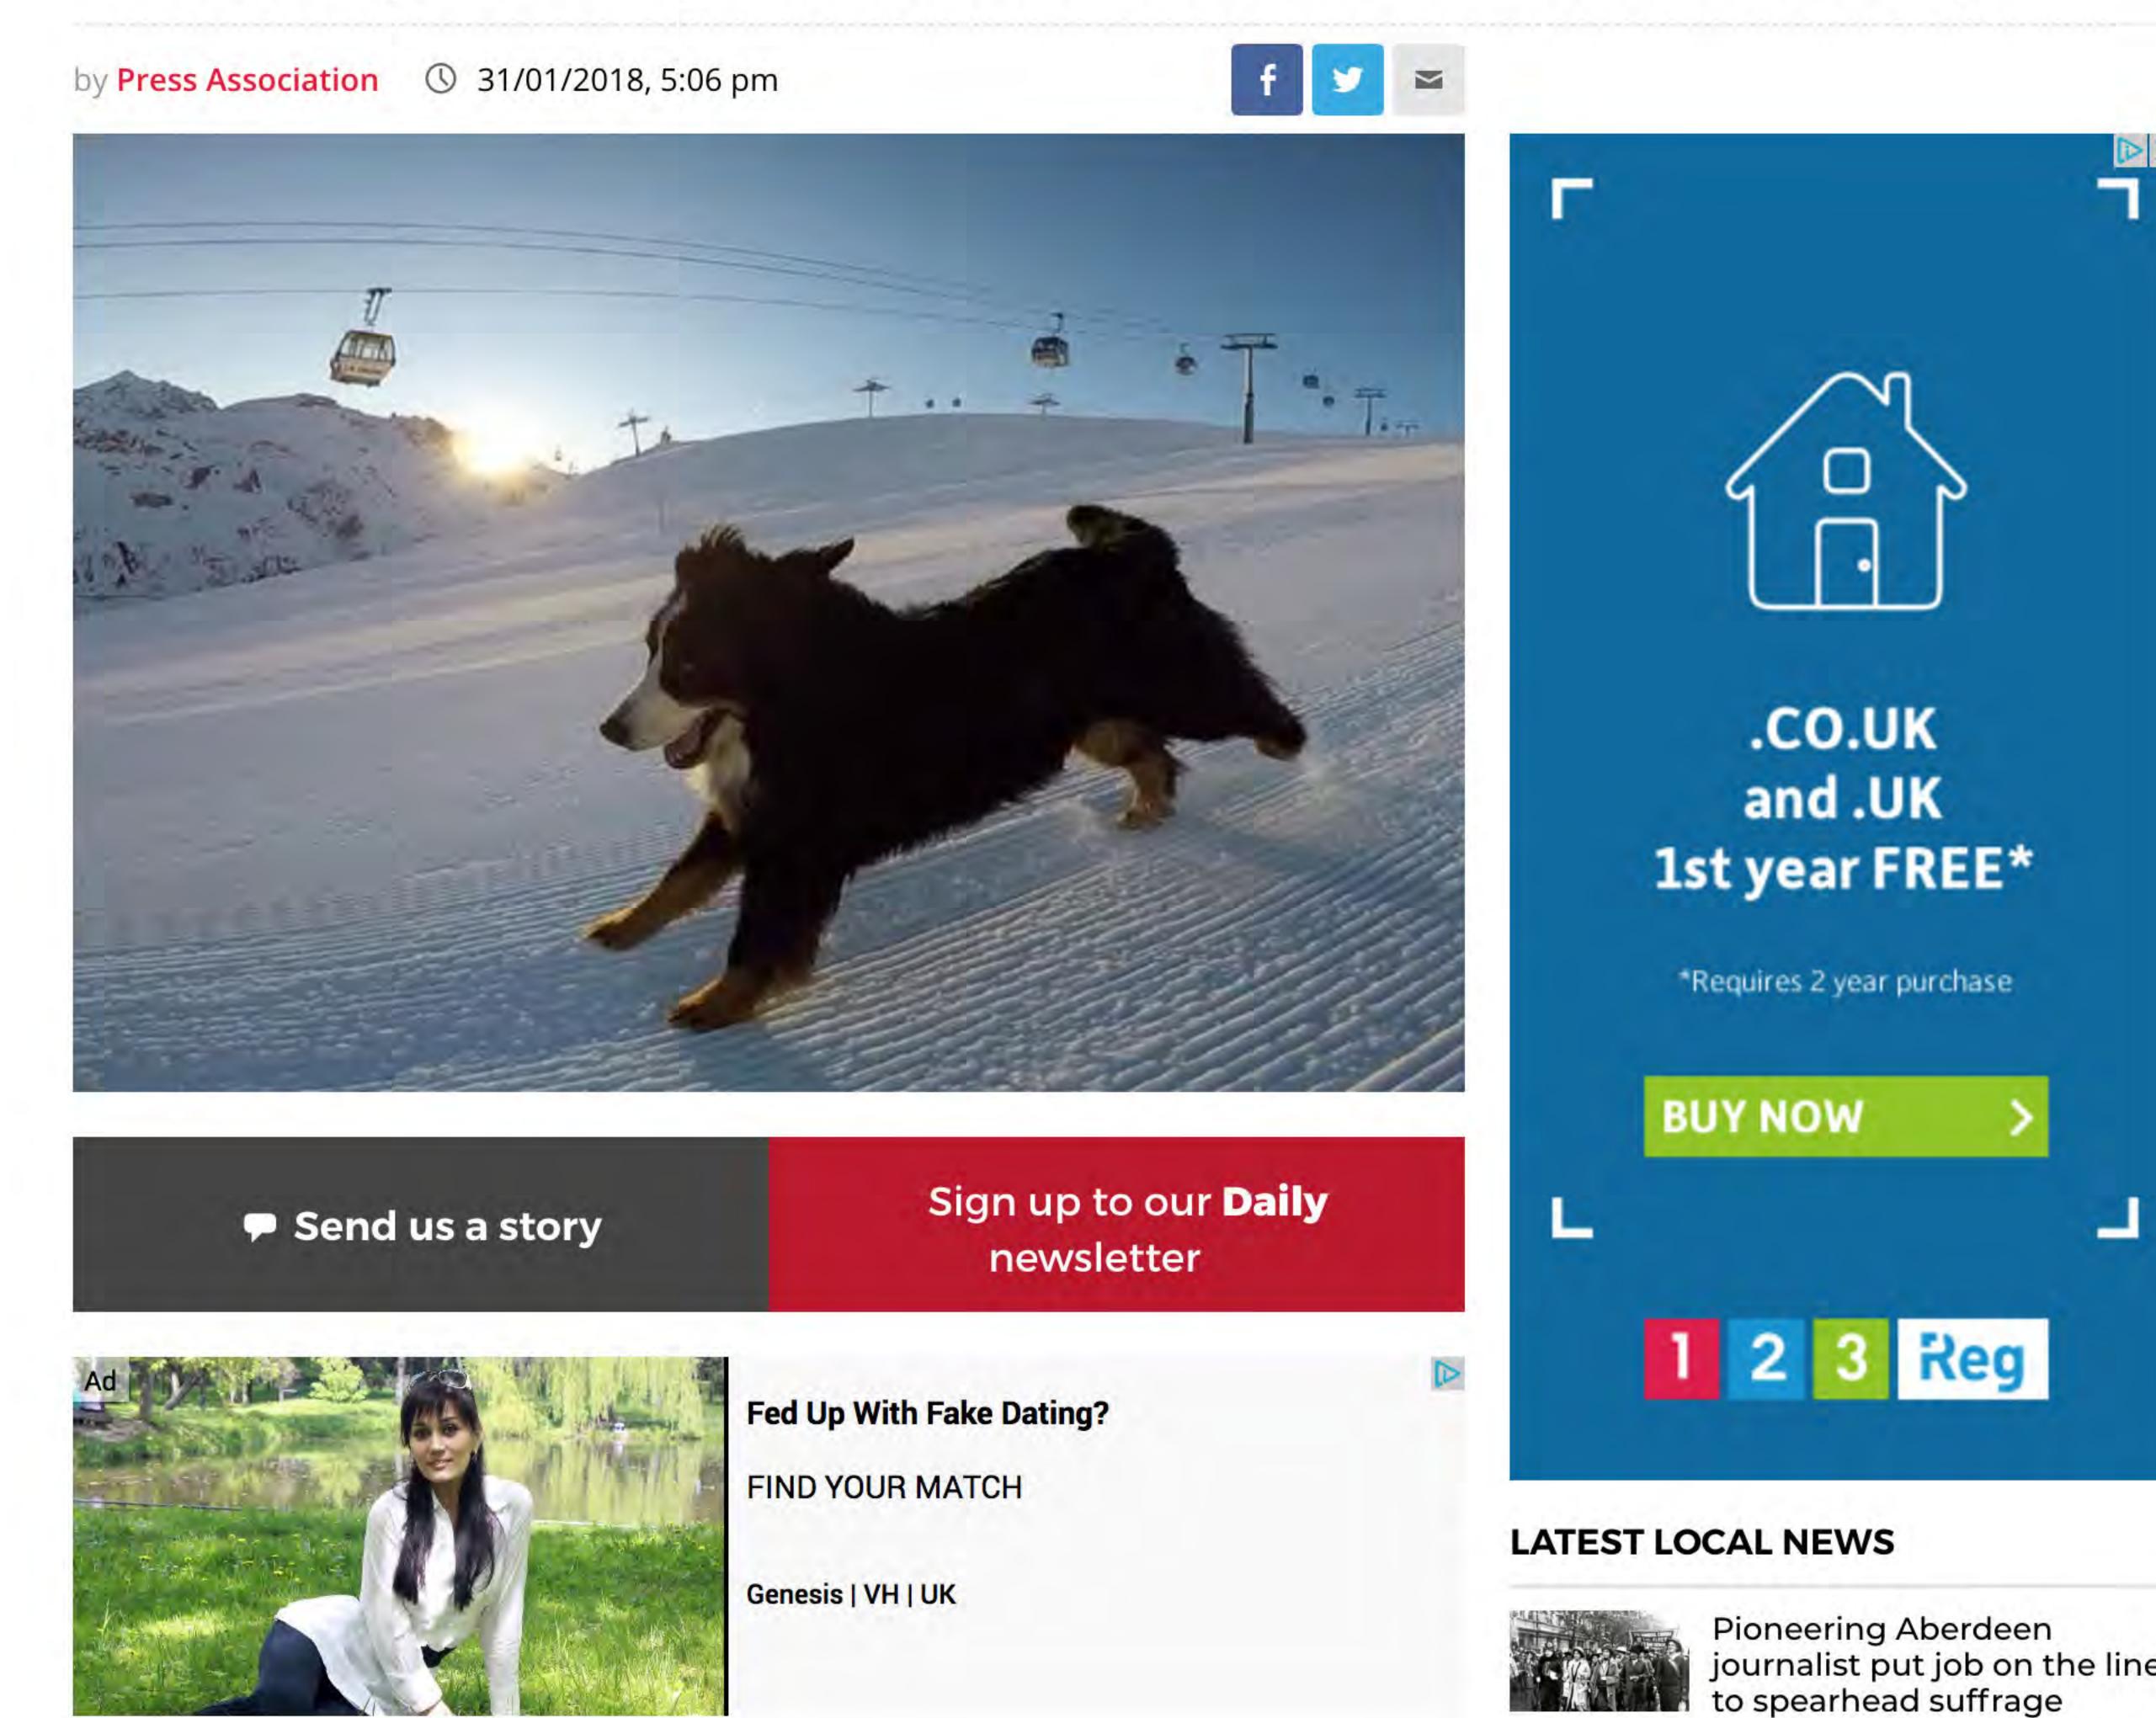

HOME NEWS

Meet the professional adventurer who shares her morning ski trips with a Bernese mountain dog

A skier and her mountain dog friend are delighting Facebook users with a video of their exploits on the slopes.

Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in Tignes in the French Alps.

Almost every day, Bernese mountain dog Islys appears at her front door and barks to let Squash know she is ready to go.

The pair then trudge up the pistes, gaining 600 metres in height. Once that's done, it's time for the fun part – a swift run down the mountain, with Islys chasing Squash all the way down.

Islys belongs to Squash's best friend and neighbour, but spends a lot of time with her adventure partner.

Although she's very friendly, Squash is aware that Islys' presence may not be welcomed by all skiers, so she gets up extremely early to use the pistes while they are empty.

journalist put job on the line movement in North-east

Aberdeen boxing champ Lee McAllister aims to help veterans get off the streets

Boy, 10, charged for allegedly possessing a weapon at North-east school

EXCLUSIVE: Hospital chiefs launch probe after boxes of patients' notes left in ARI corridor for a week

Kevin Bridges adds two more Aberdeen dates after tickets sell out

LATEST SPORT NEWS

League Two: Peterhead skipper McCracken in call for charges to chase down Montrose with games in hand

"I get up early in the morning before the lifts open because she's very enthusiastic and she has a tendency to leap around and want to play with skiers and tear around after them," she said.

"It's quite intimidating for a lot of people and you can't sort of have a dog roaming around."

Squash may have to bring a set of gear with her on their adventures, but Islys is perfectly equipped with her woolly coat and long claws to grip the snow.

Squash shares videos and photos of her adventures with Islys and her myriad other activities like paragliding, motorbiking and mountain climbing on her Facebook page, but the dog always gets the biggest response from fans.

"I do certain projects and things for sponsors and I work really hard on my social media," she said. "But I put a picture of the dog up and it just does better than anything!"

That's not to say that Squash's other posts are boring, however.

She has climbed Mount Everest and Kilimanjaro, climbed and then flown a paraglider off Mont Blanc (the first British woman to do so) and motorcycled in Baja California, Mexico.

She makes her living from sponsorship and public speaking, inspiring others to seek out their adventurous sides.

Outnumbered Damien eyes Swift return to Wrestlezone summit after securing grudge match win

Ski-ing: Trio called up to Scottish slopes team for schools championships

Golf: Champ's champ Thomson hopes to drive himself to make Mark on District team

Peterhead's Brown confident they can bounce back after frustrating defeat to Montrose

RETRAINING/ DEVELOPMENT OPPORTUNITY

Dyce, Aberdeen To be confirmed

SALES ADMINISTRATOR

Ad

By Taylor Heyman, Press Association January 31 2018 5:03 PM

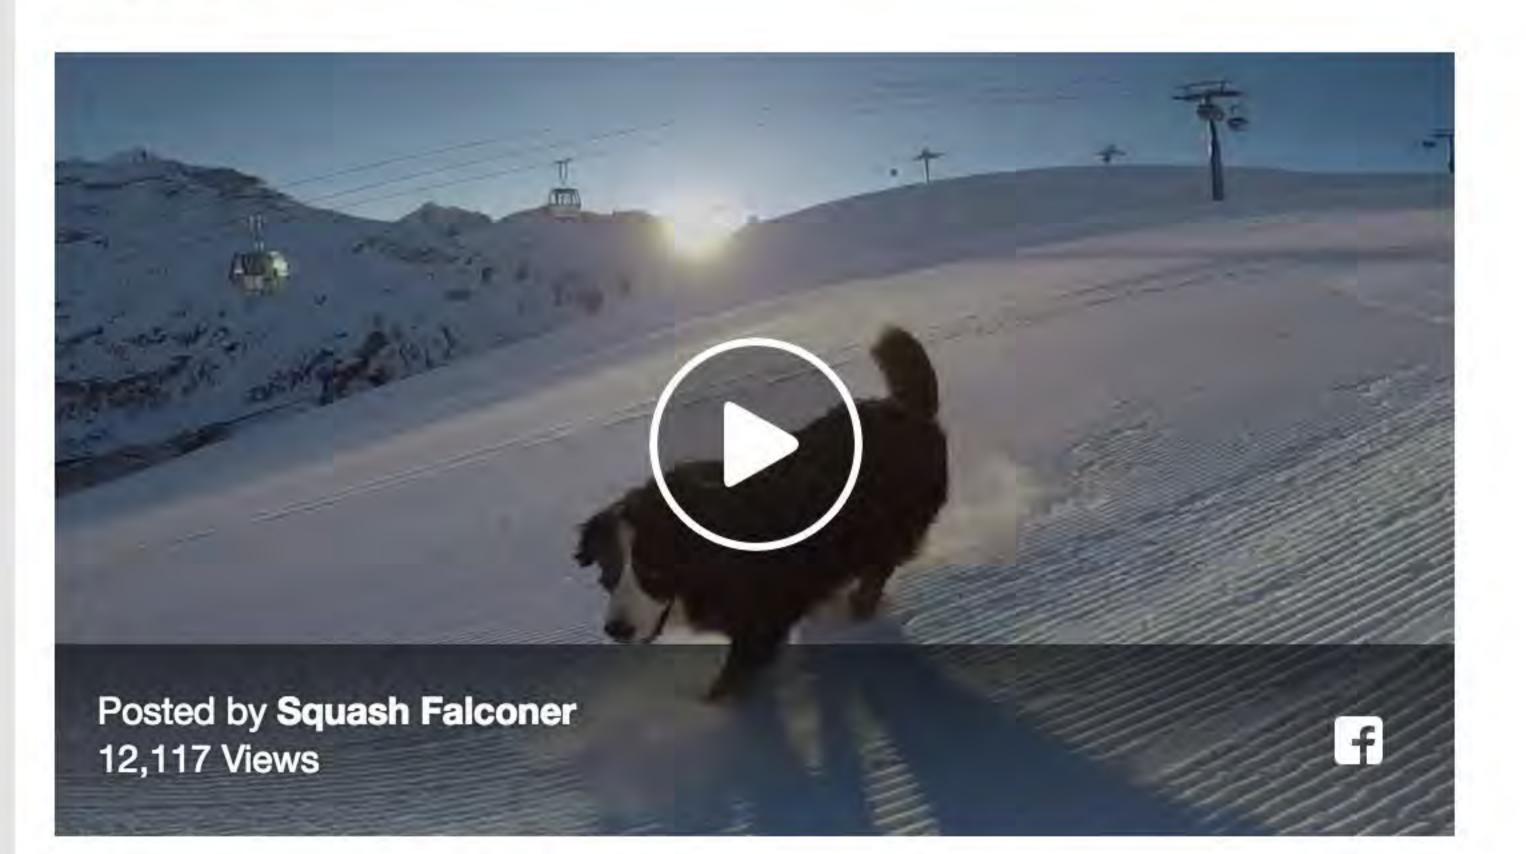

A skier and her mountain dog friend are delighting Facebook users with a video of their exploits on the slopes.

Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in Tignes in the French Alps.

Almost every day, Bernese mountain dog Islys appears at her front door and barks to let Squash know she is ready to go.

The pair then trudge up the pistes, gaining 600 metres in height. Once that's done, it's time for the fun part – a swift run down the mountain, with Islys chasing Squash all the way down.

Islys belongs to Squash's best friend and neighbour, but spends a lot of time with her adventure partner.

Although she's very friendly, Squash is aware that Islys' presence may not be welcomed by all skiers, so she gets up extremely early to use the pistes while they are empty.

"I get up early in the morning before the lifts open because she's very enthusiastic and she has a tendency to leap around and want to play with skiers and tear around after them," she said.

companion offer

The Daily Digest

Today's news headlines, directly to your inbox every morning.

Email address	Sign Up
	100000000000

Promoted Links

by Outbrain

Meet Phantom Devialet

Lottery fever strikes as Brits still have chance on tonight's £372 Million Insider Lifestyles

"It's quite intimidating for a lot of people and you can't sort of have a dog roaming around."

Squash may have to bring a set of gear with her on their adventures, but Islys is perfectly equipped with her woolly coat and long claws to grip the snow.

Related content

ADVERTISING

Lloyds customers are rushing to find out how much they are due Bank Refunds

Eamonn Holmes reveals heartbreaking Ruth Langsford news as OBE... The Express

Editors Choice

Haunting guilt of reluctant hero - Read powerful interview with Munich air disaster survivor Harry Gregg...

Ireland's 20 best walks: Joe O'Shea's pick of familyfriendly trails

'Why should we have to give terrorists a proper burial?' battle over bodies rages quietly in Iraq's Mosul Insight after Isis...

inRead invented by Teads

Squash shares videos and photos of her adventures with Islys and her myriad other activities like paragliding, motorbiking and mountain climbing on her Facebook page, but the dog always gets the biggest response from fans.

"I do certain projects and things for sponsors and I work really hard on my social media," she said. "But I put a picture of the dog up and it just does better than anything!"

quashfalconer

Following

0)

274 likes

squashfalconer Monday in the mountains 🤌 - - - - @tignesofficiel @salomonfreeski @gopro @ozoneparagliders @suunto #paragliderpilot #hero5 #tignes #tignesaddict #mountaingirl #adventurer #adventurewomen #squashfalconer #suuntocore #pxhero4life

view all 11 comments

11 MONTHS AGO

That's not to say that Squash's other posts are boring, however.

She has climbed Mount Everest and Kilimanjaro, climbed and then flown a paraglider off Mont Blanc (the first British woman to do so) and motorcycled in Baja California, Mexico.

She makes her living from sponsorship and public speaking, inspiring others to seek out their adventurous sides.

Press Association

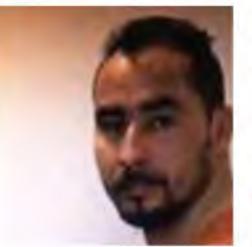

Also in World News

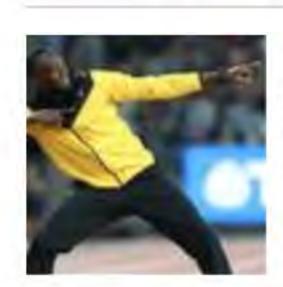

Turkey 'has met EU criteria for visa-free travel' A senior Turkish official said the country has fulfilled all 72 requirements set...

لهنه

EI.

Man charged over drink-drive crash that killed NFL player US prosecutors have charged an illegal immigrant over an alleged drink-driving crash...

Usain Bolt says he will reward Winter Olympians who strike his famous pose on the... Usain Bolt is offering prizes to athletes who pose ...

Orangutan shot with air gun 130 times in second Borneo killing

A male orangutan on the Indonesian portion...

People making puns from name of Kylie Jenner's baby and we're here for it

Fans of Kylie Jenner have been waiting with baited...

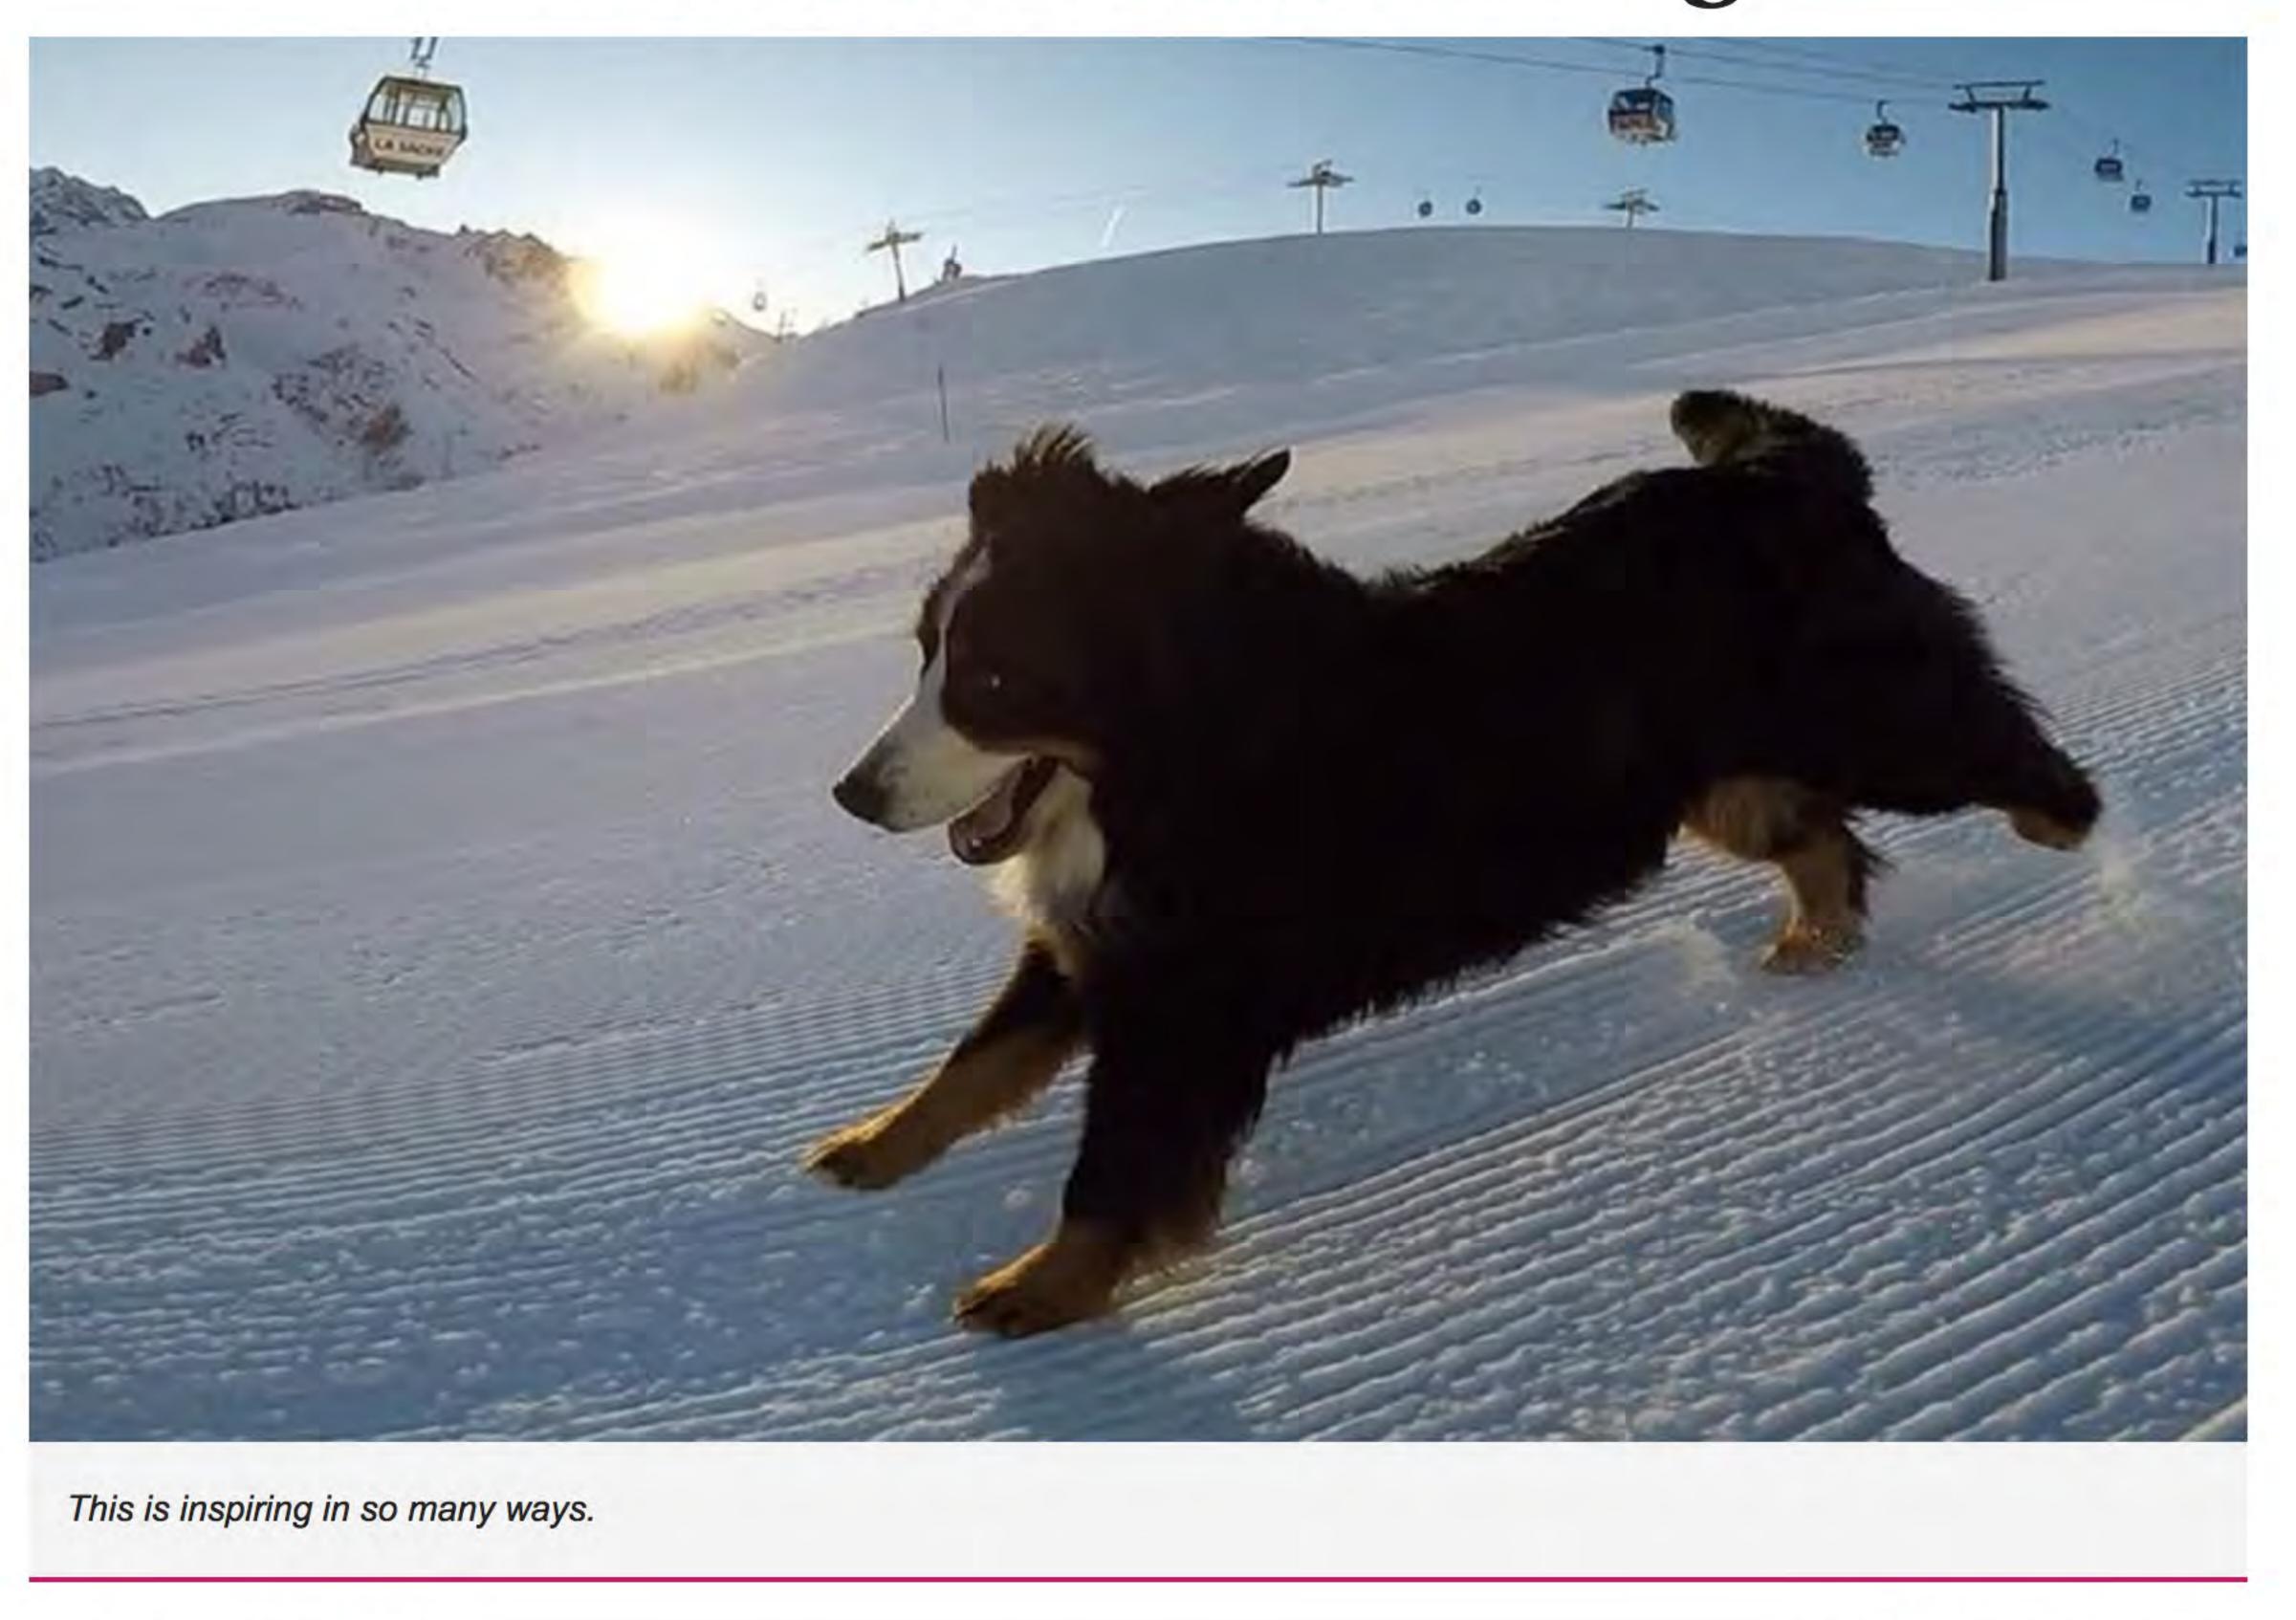

TODAY'S PAPER NOTICES PLACE A NOTICE SHOP DIRECTORY

SUBSCRIBE LOG IN NEED HELP?

Science Technology All Entertainment Movies Music TV Soaps

Meet the professional adventurer who shares her morning ski trips with a Bernese mountain dog

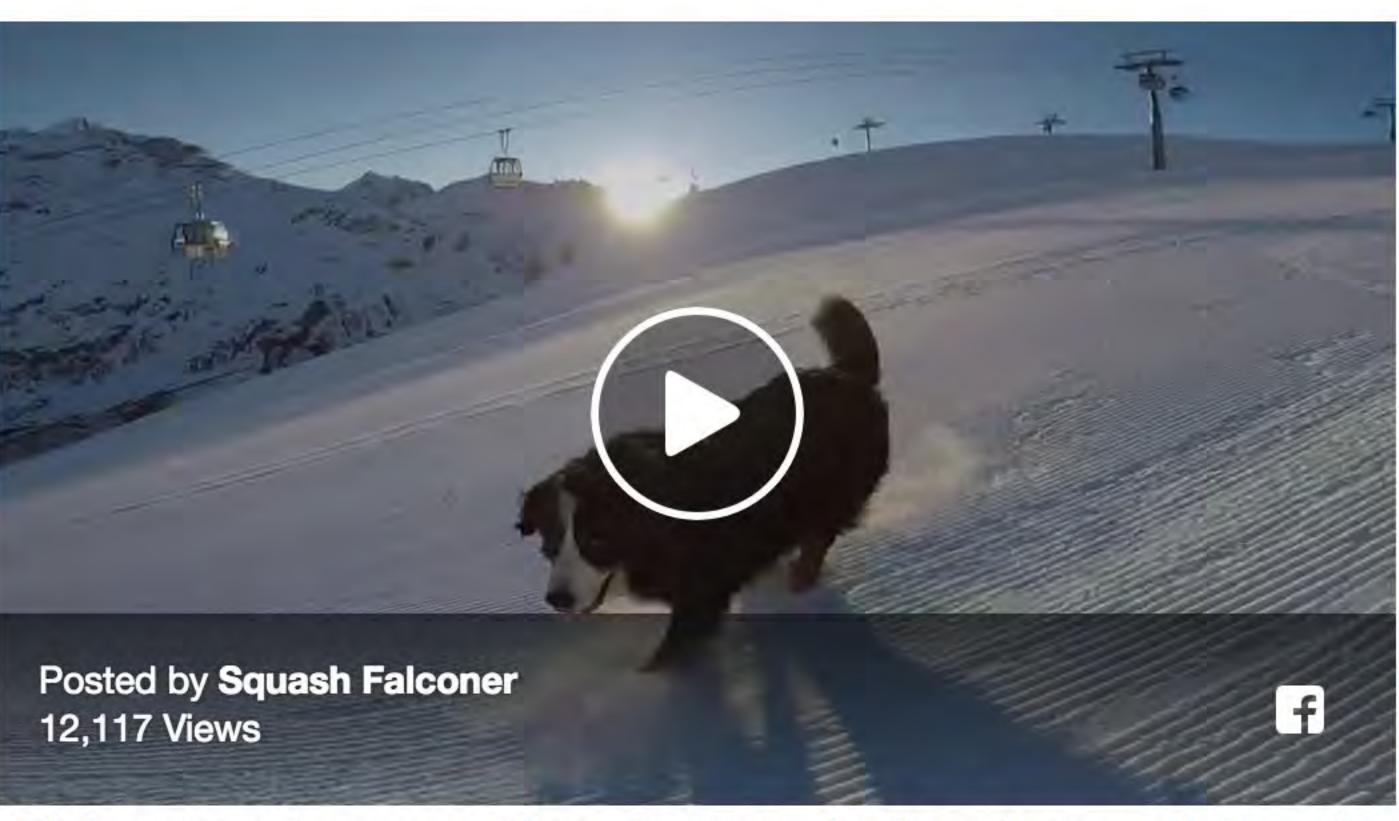

01 February, 2018 11:45

🎔 f G+ 🖬 in 🖨

A skier and her mountain dog friend are delighting Facebook users with a video of their exploits on the slopes. Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in Tignes in the French Alps.

Almost every day, Bernese mountain dog Islys appears at her front door and barks to let Squash know she is ready to go.

The pair then trudge up the pistes, gaining 600 metres in height. Once that's done, it's time for the fun part – a swift run down the mountain, with Islys chasing Squash all the way down.

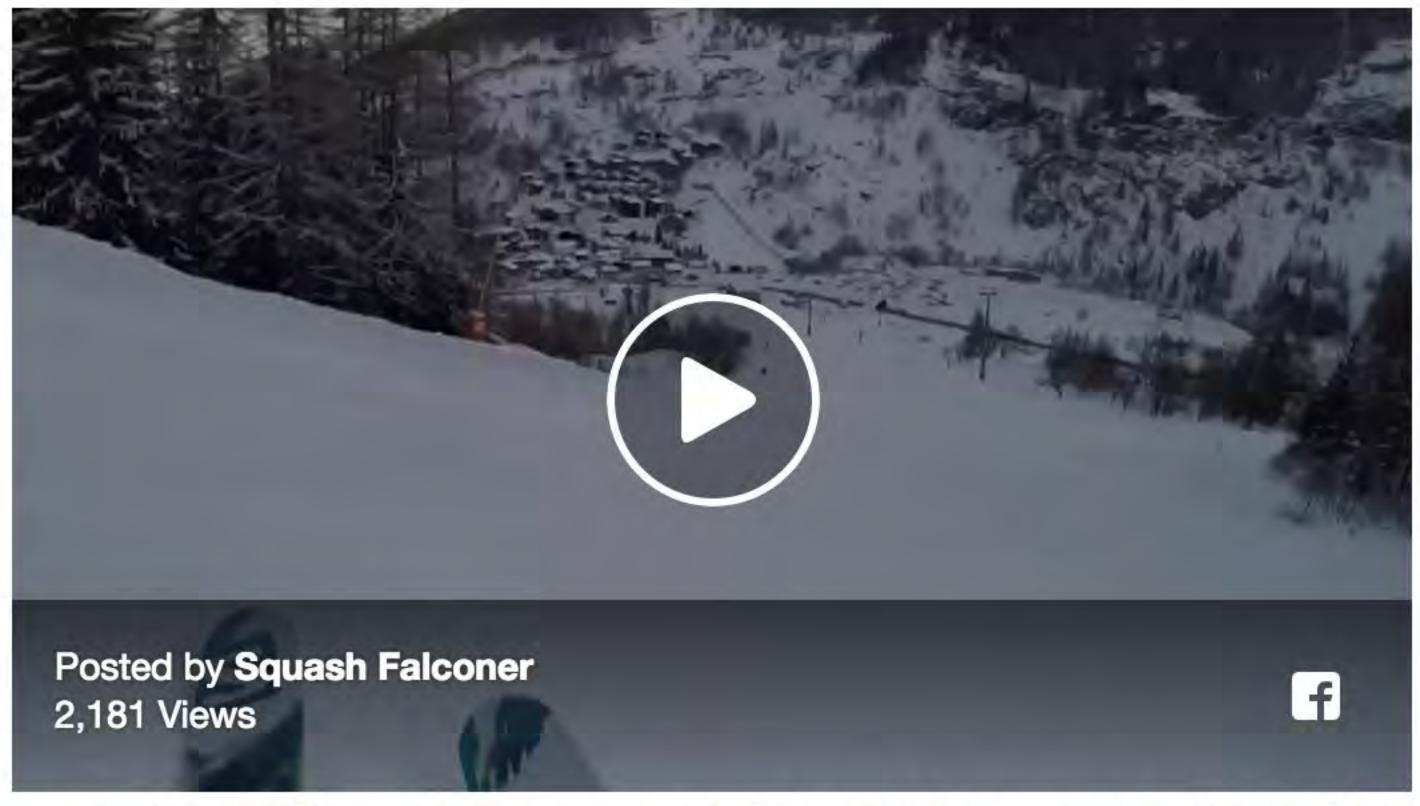

Islys belongs to Squash's best friend and neighbour, but spends a lot of time with her adventure partner.

Although she's very friendly, Squash is aware that Islys' presence may not be welcomed by all skiers, so she gets up extremely early to use the pistes while they are empty.

"I get up early in the morning before the lifts open because she's very enthusiastic and she has a tendency to leap around and want to play with skiers and tear around after them," she said.

"It's quite intimidating for a lot of people and you can't sort of have a dog roaming around."

Squash may have to bring a set of gear with her on their adventures, but Islys is perfectly equipped with her woolly coat and long claws to grip the snow.

Squash shares videos and photos of her adventures with Islys and her myriad other activities like paragliding, motorbiking and mountain climbing on her Facebook page, but the dog always gets the biggest response from fans.

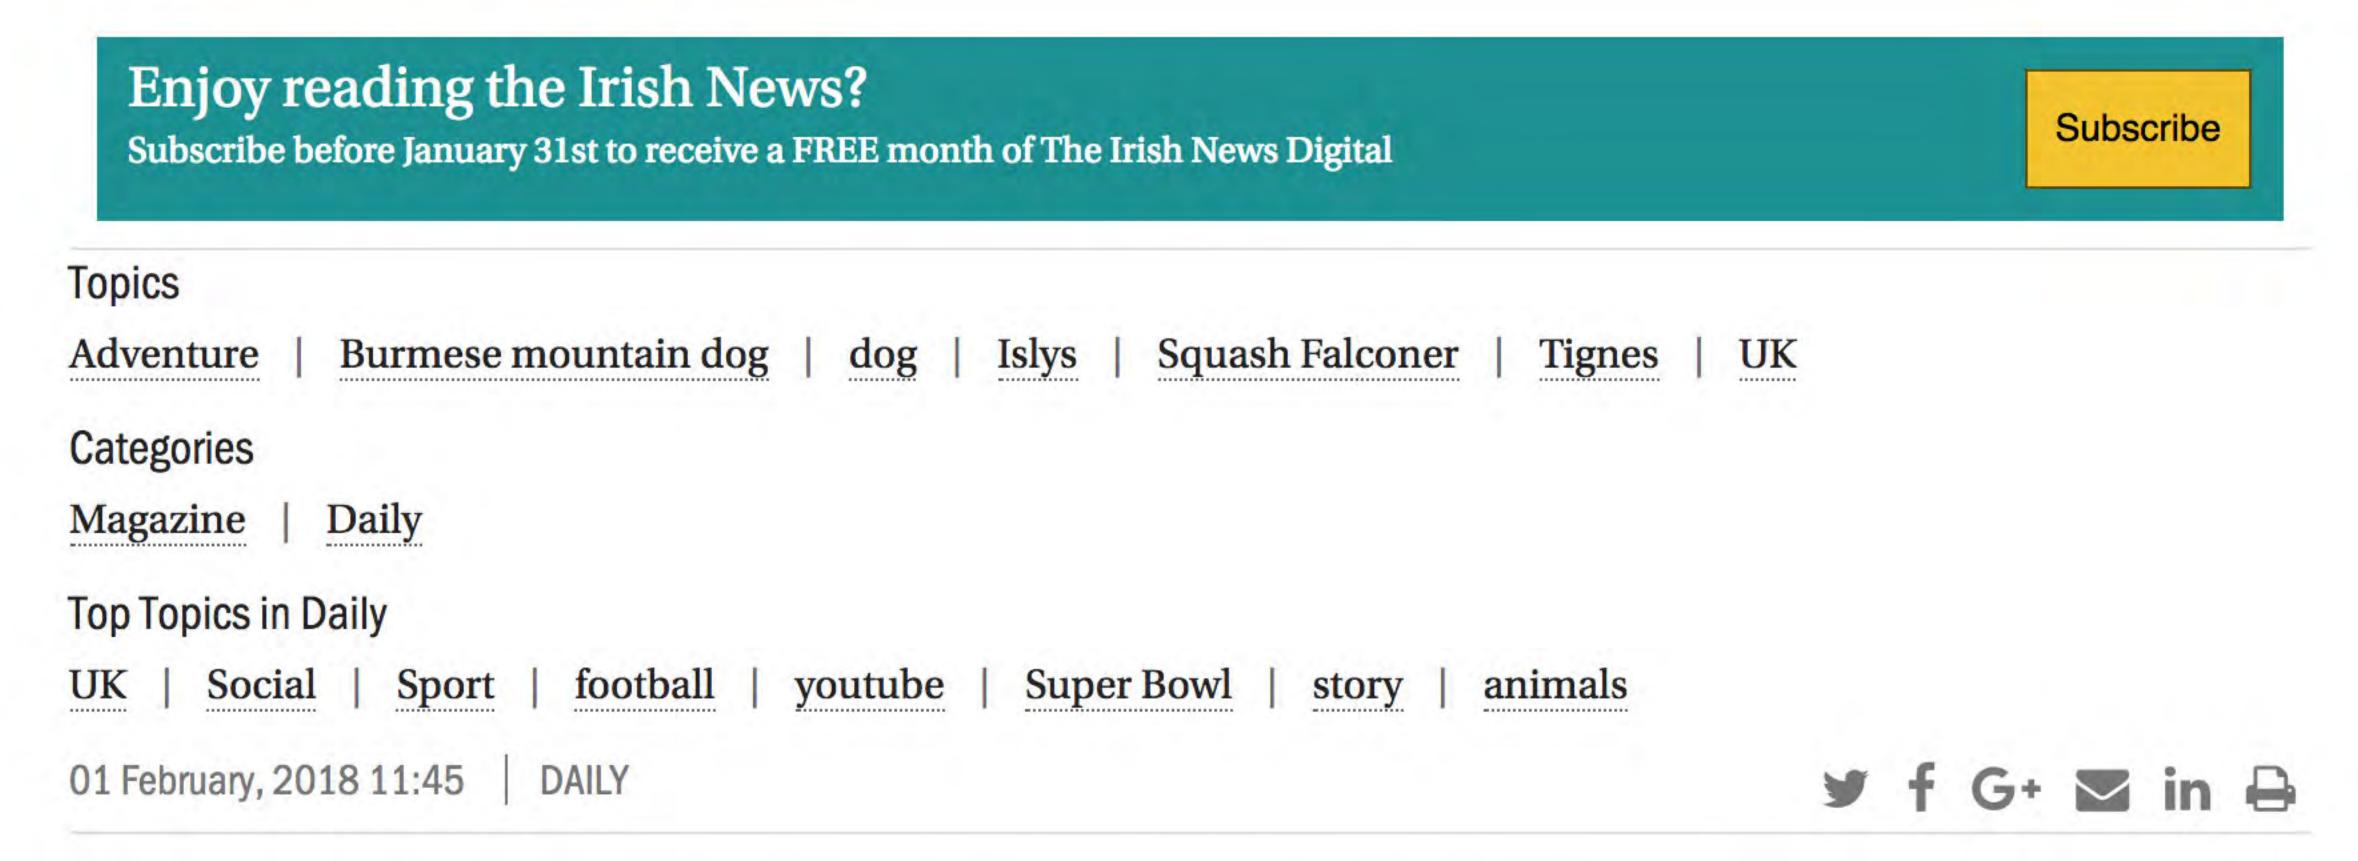

"I do certain projects and things for sponsors and I work really hard on my social media," she said. "But I put a picture of the dog up and it just does better than anything!"

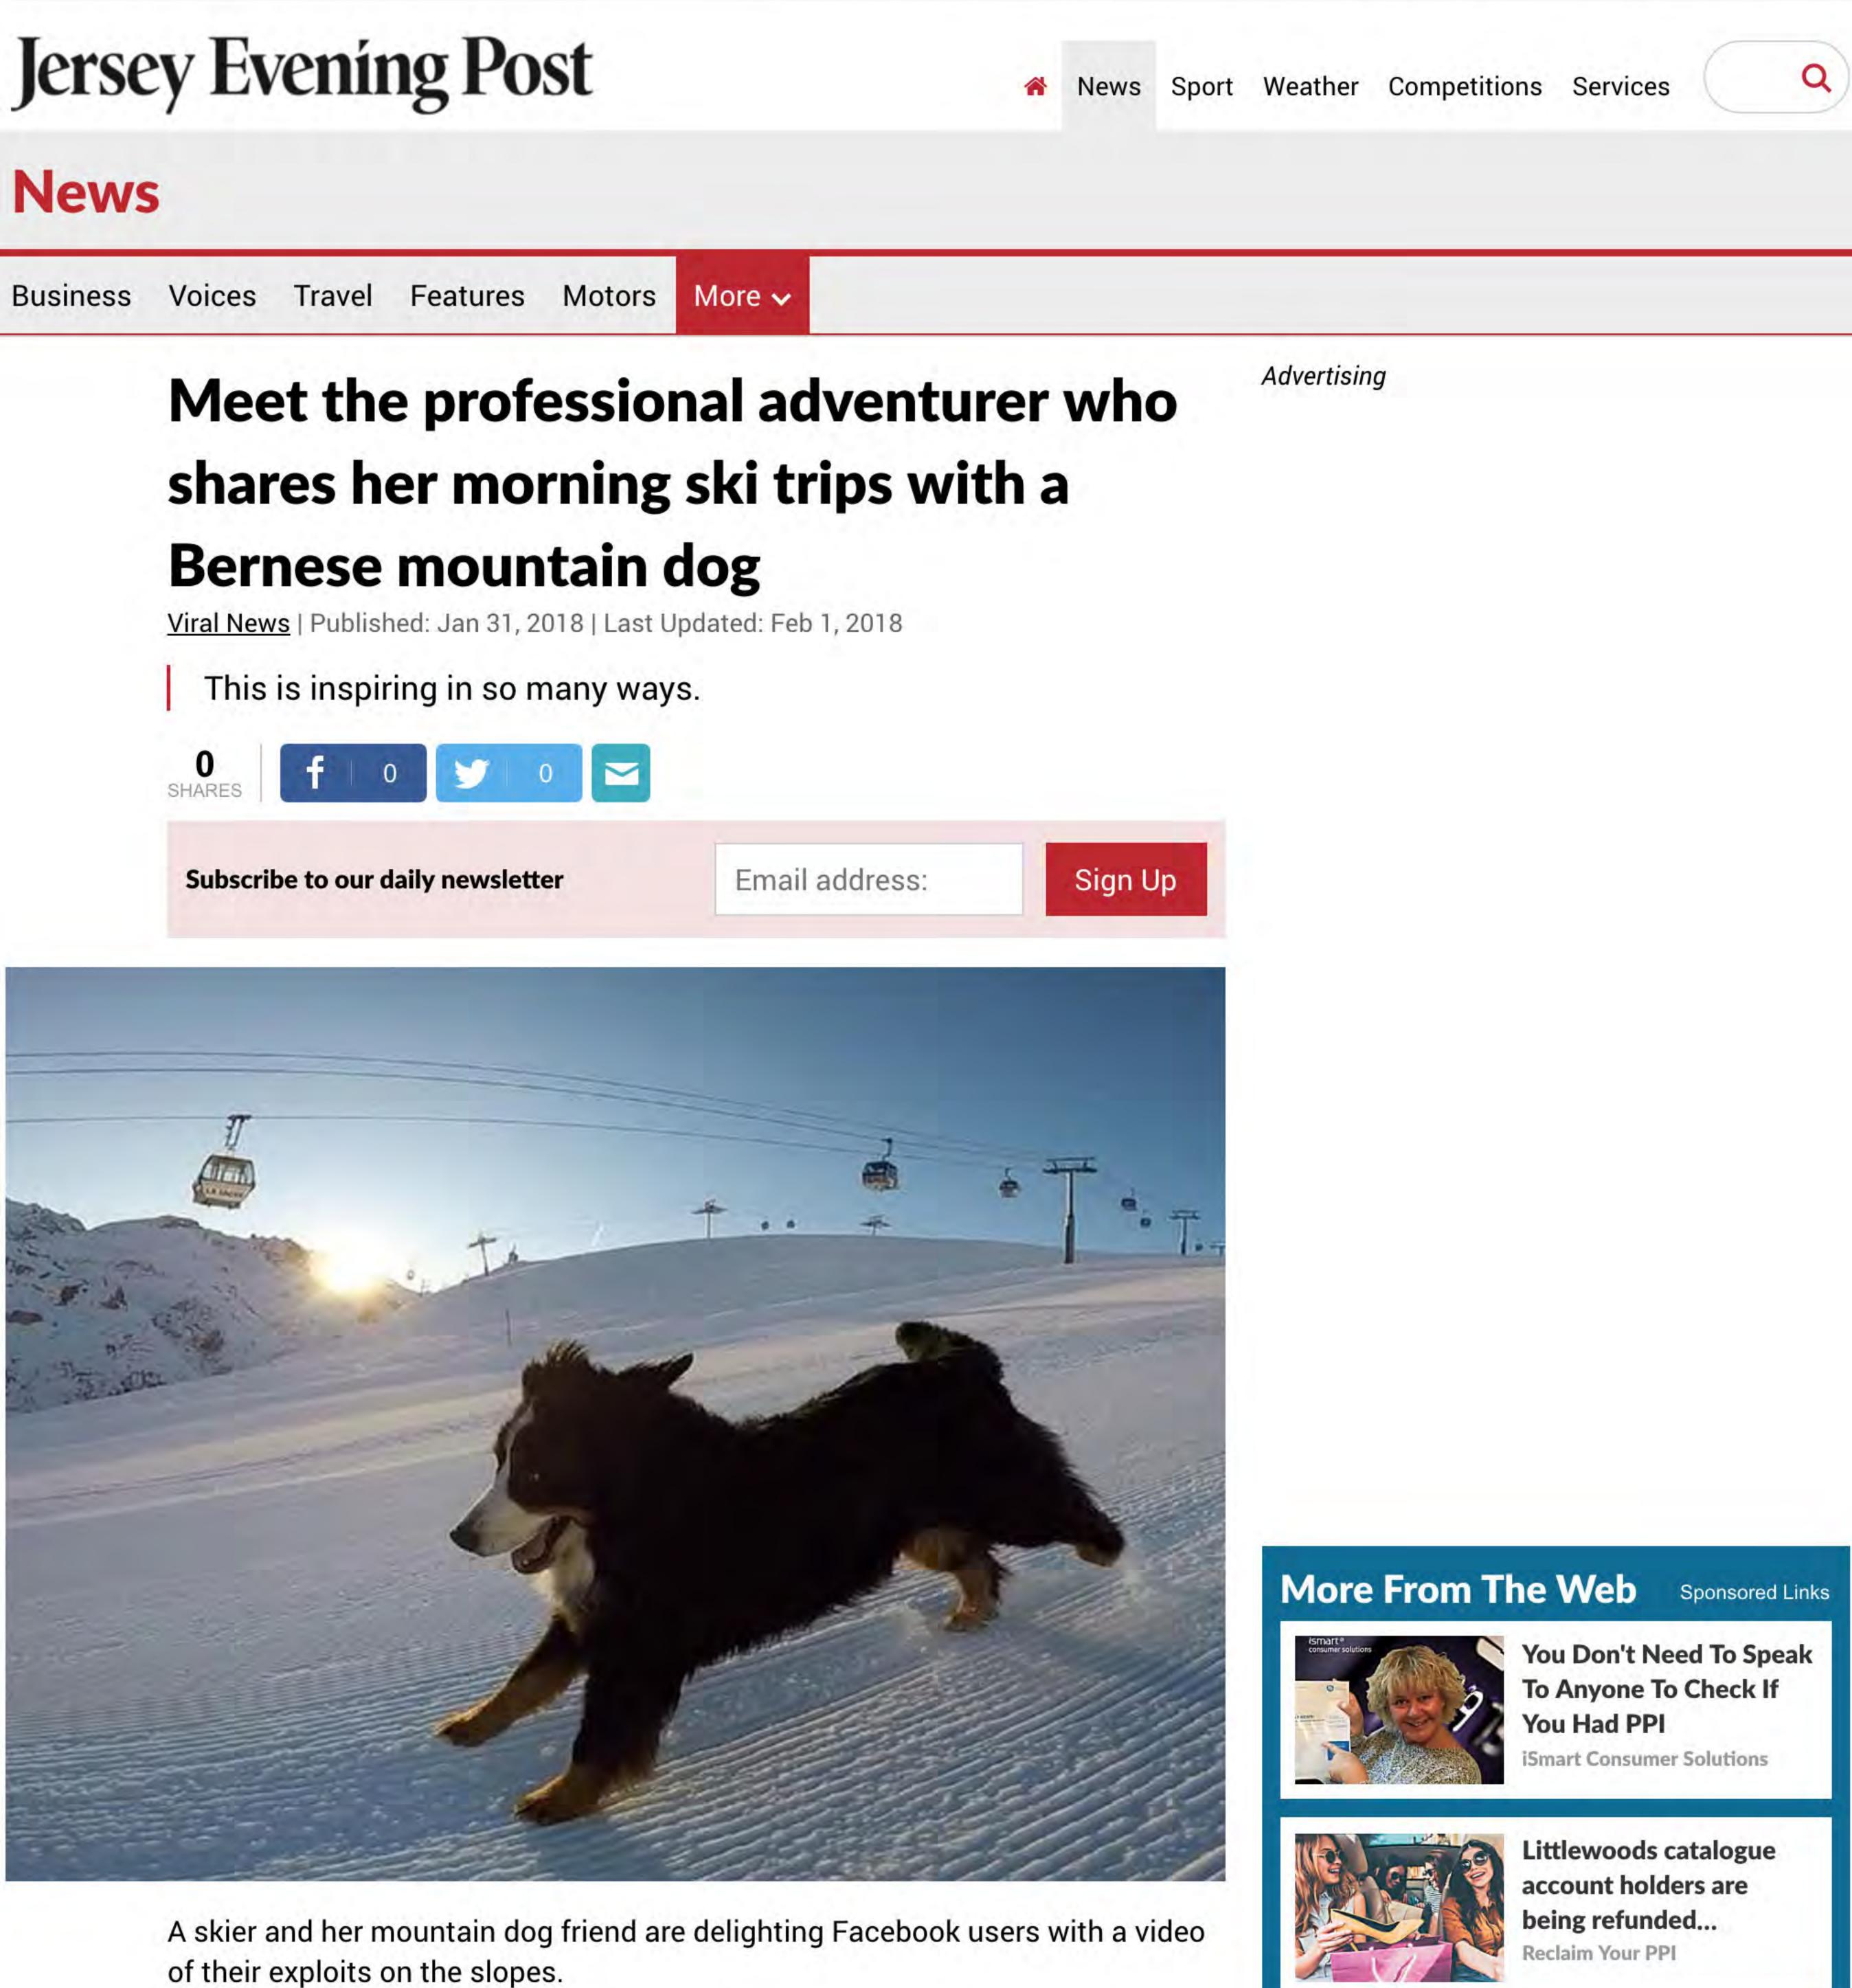

That's not to say that Squash's other posts are boring, however.

She has climbed Mount Everest and Kilimanjaro, climbed and then flown a paraglider off Mont Blanc (the first British woman to do so) and motorcycled in Baja California, Mexico.

She makes her living from sponsorship and public speaking, inspiring others to seek out their adventurous sides.

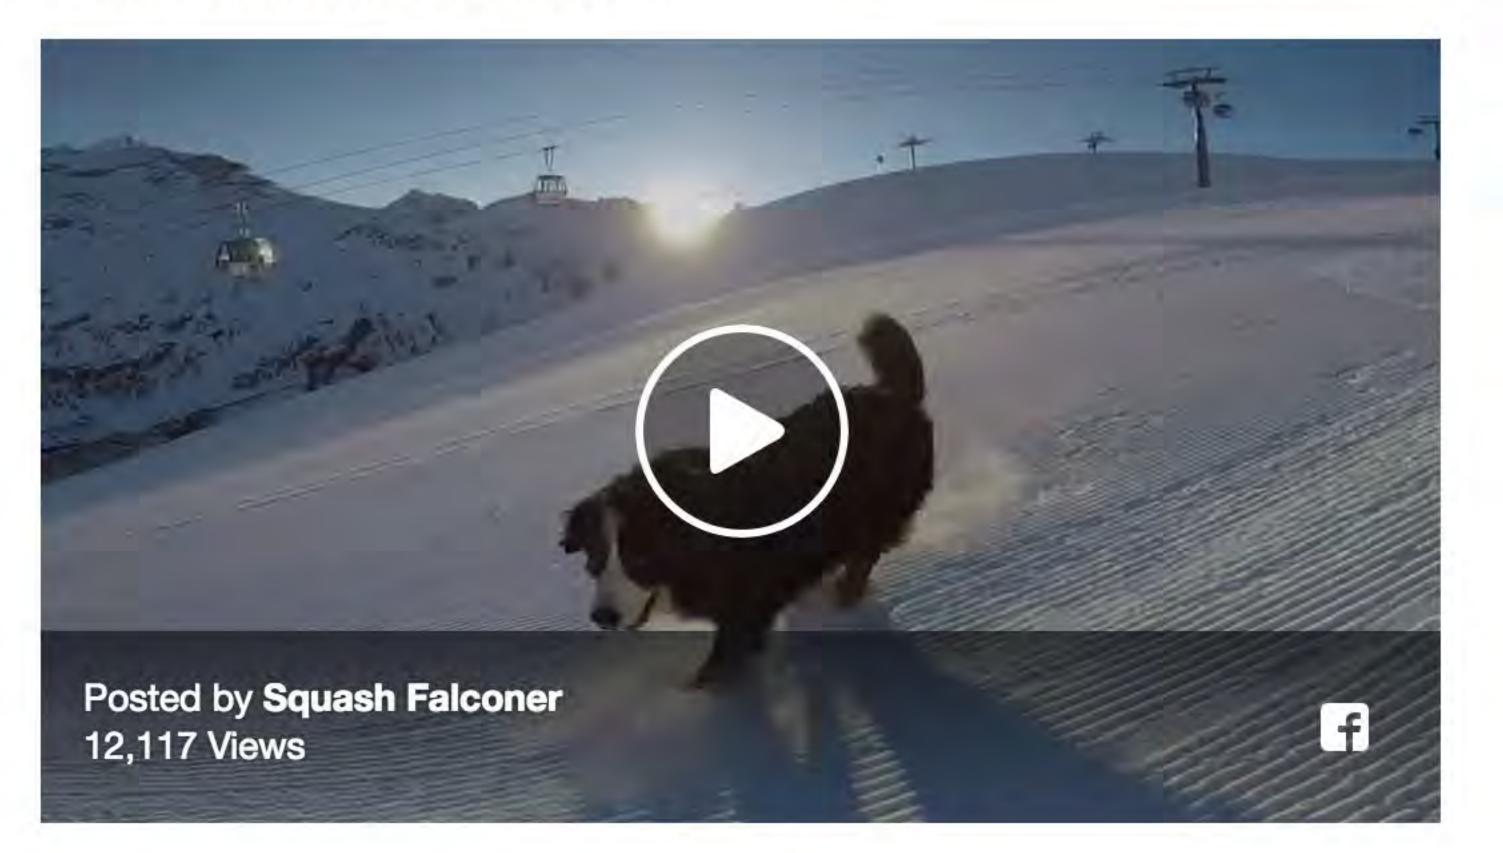

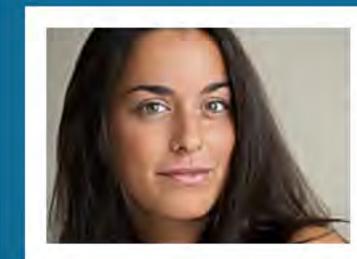

Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in Tignes in the French Alps.

Almost every day, Bernese mountain dog Islys appears at her front door and barks to let Squash know she is ready to go.

The pair then trudge up the pistes, gaining 600 metres in height. Once that's done, it's time for the fun part – a swift run down the mountain, with Islys chasing Squash all the way down.

Although she's very friendly, Squash is aware that Islys' presence may not be welcomed by all skiers, so she gets up extremely early to use the pistes while they are empty.

6 UK Dating Sites You Should Try Today top10.me

This Is Why He Got Private Health Insurance Best Health Insure Quotes

by Taboola 🝺

Most Read

News | 4 hours ago

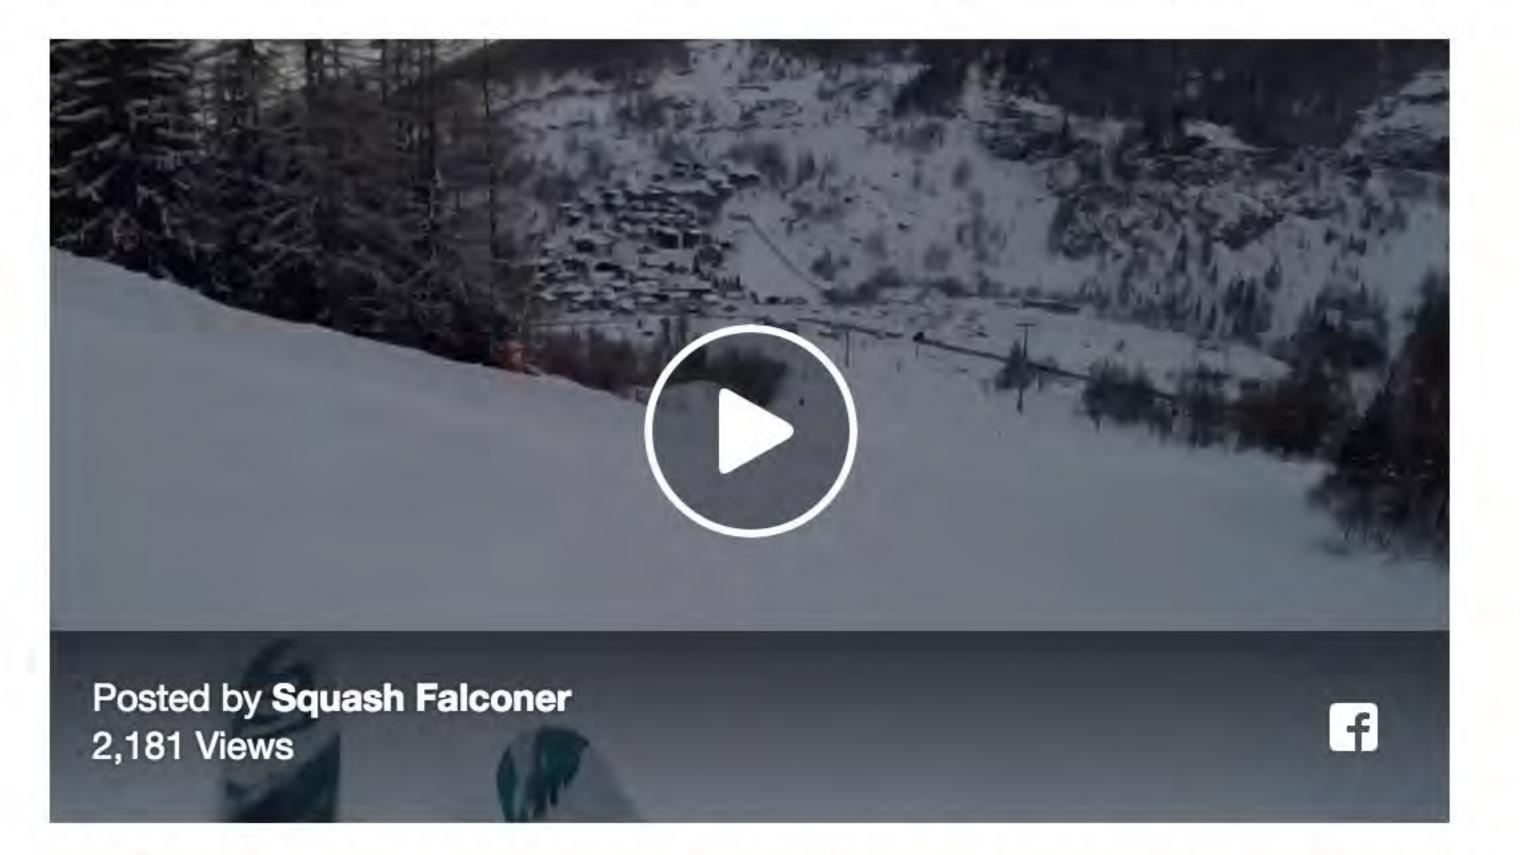

News | Less than an hour ago

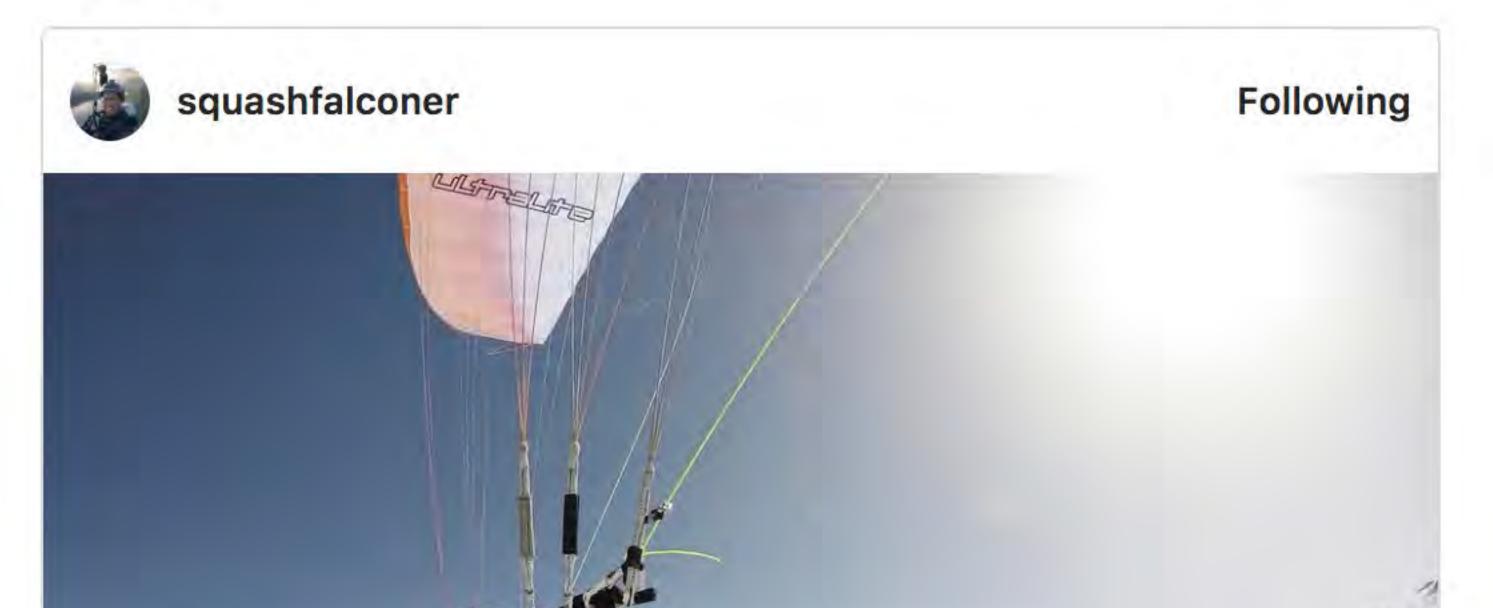

"I get up early in the morning before the lifts open because she's very enthusiastic and she has a tendency to leap around and want to play with skiers and tear around after them," she said.

"It's quite intimidating for a lot of people and you can't sort of have a dog roaming around."

Squash may have to bring a set of gear with her on their adventures, but Islys is perfectly equipped with her woolly coat and long claws to grip the snow.

"I do certain projects and things for sponsors and I work really hard on my social media," she said. "But I put a picture of the dog up and it just does better than anything!"

'States should cover cost of parental leave plans'

News | 2 hours ago

Plan for six new consultants at the Hospital

News | 2 hours ago

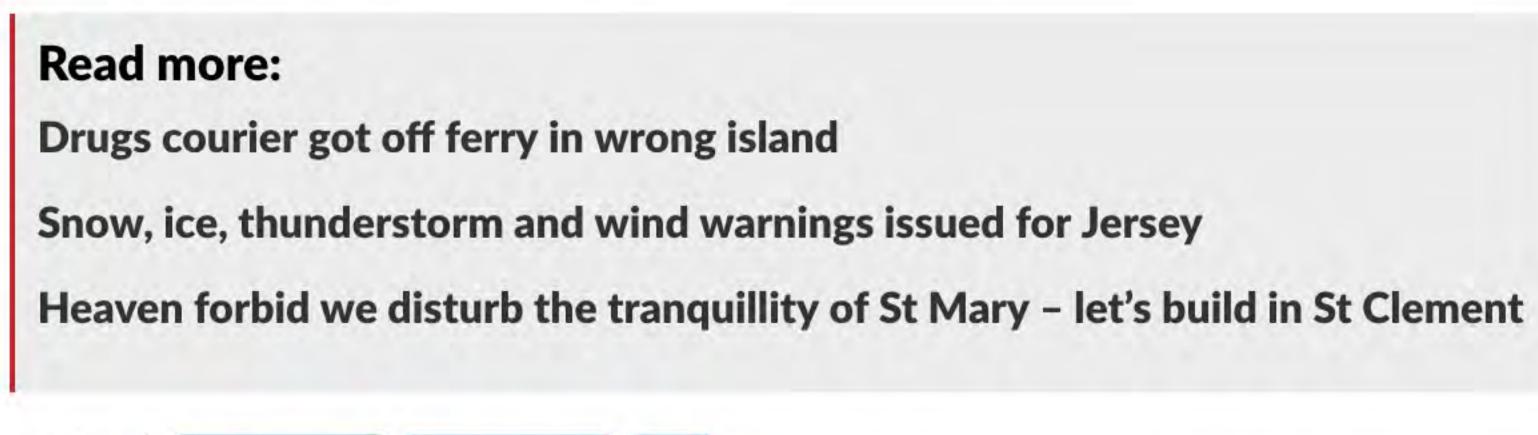

Advertising

3

	M
274 likes squashfalconer Monday in the mountains 3 @tignesofficiel @salomonfreeski @gopro @ozoneparagliders @suunto #paragliderpilot #hero5 #tignes #tignesaddict #mountaingirl #adventurer #adventurewom #squashfalconer #suuntocore #pxhero4life	ien
view all 11 comments
11 MONTHS AGO	0

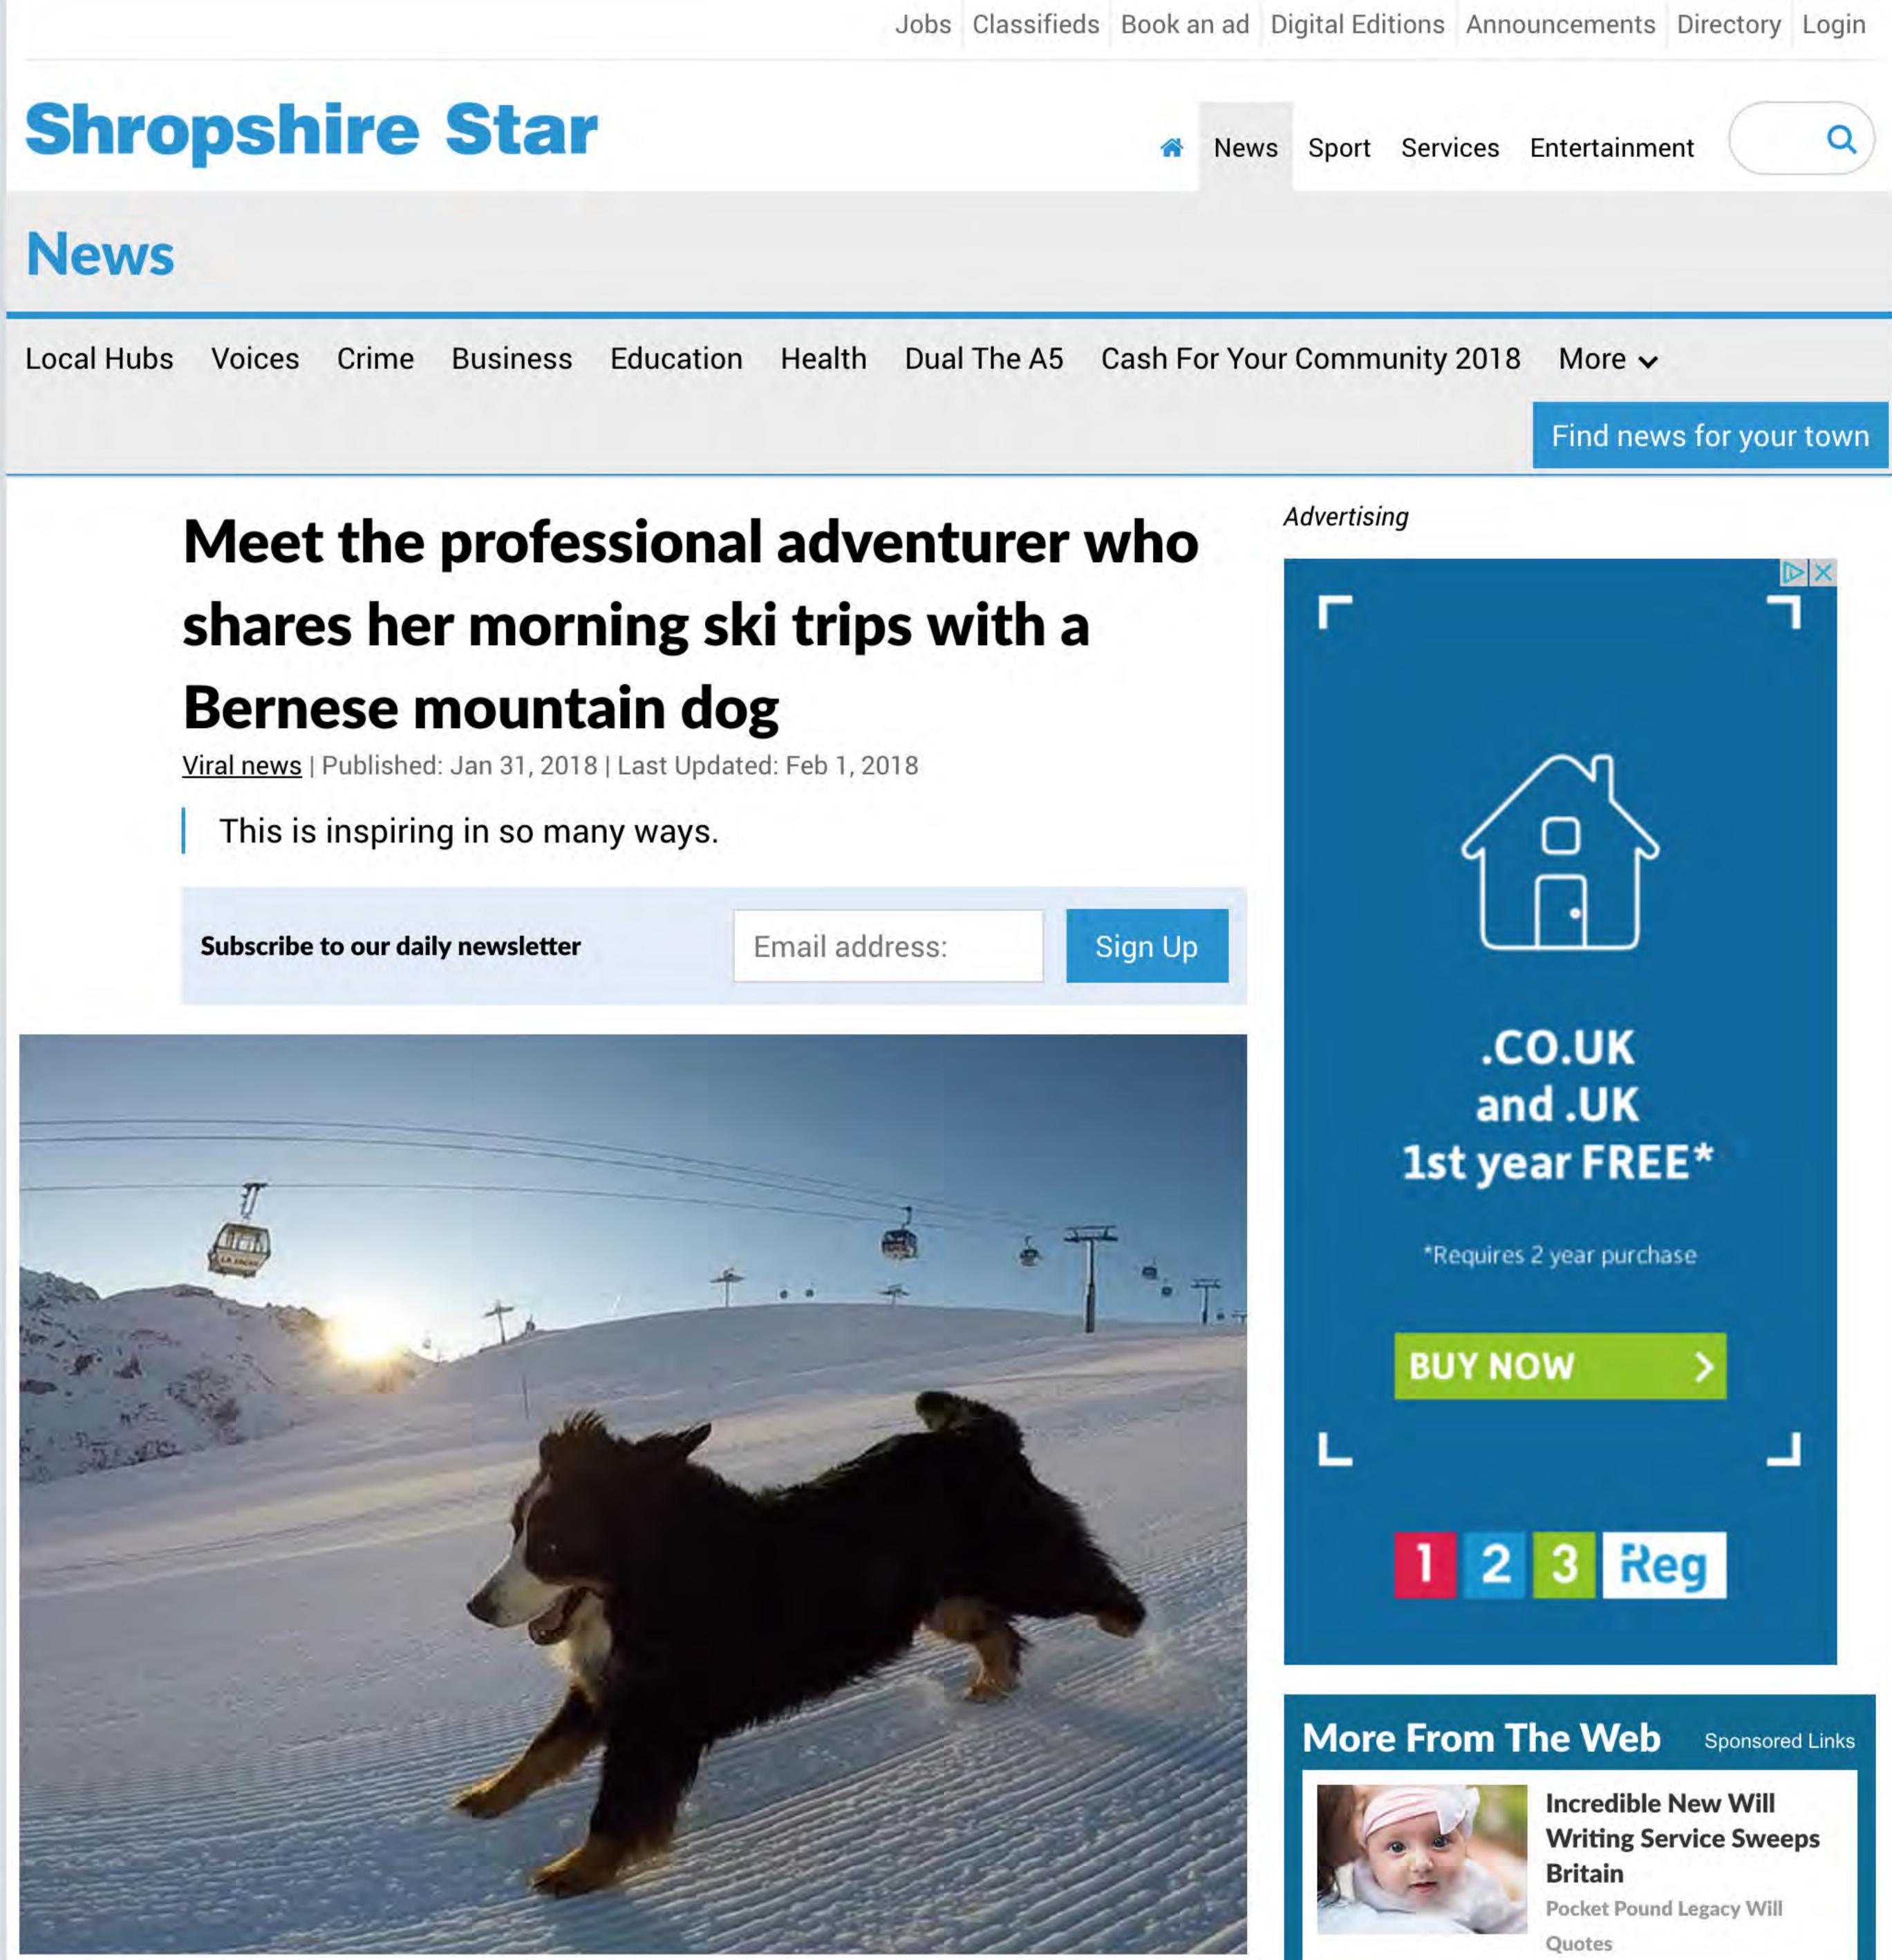

She has climbed Mount Everest and Kilimanjaro, climbed and then flown a paraglider off Mont Blanc (the first British woman to do so) and motorcycled in Baja California, Mexico.

She makes her living from sponsorship and public speaking, inspiring others to seek out their adventurous sides.

Viral News

This pair are the best fo friends (Squash Falconer/PA)

A skier and her mountain dog friend are delighting Facebook users with a video of their exploits on the slopes.

Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in Tignes in the French Alps.

Almost every day, Bernese mountain dog Islys appears at her front door and barks to let Squash know she is ready to go.

The pair then trudge up the pistes, gaining 600 metres in height. Once that's done, it's time for the fun part – a swift run down the mountain, with Islys chasing Squash all the way down.

Ski touring early in the mornings before the lifts open with this one is just ace? Tignes GoPro Posted by Squash Falconer on Tuesday, January 30, 2018

Lloyds customers are being refunded thousands! LB Money Back

17 Actors You Didn't Know Were Gay - No. 8 Will Shock Women Journalistate

The Real Reason Invisible Hearing Aids Are Sweeping The UK HearClear

Although she's very friendly, Squash is aware that Islys' presence may not be welcomed by all skiers, so she gets up extremely early to use the pistes while they are empty.

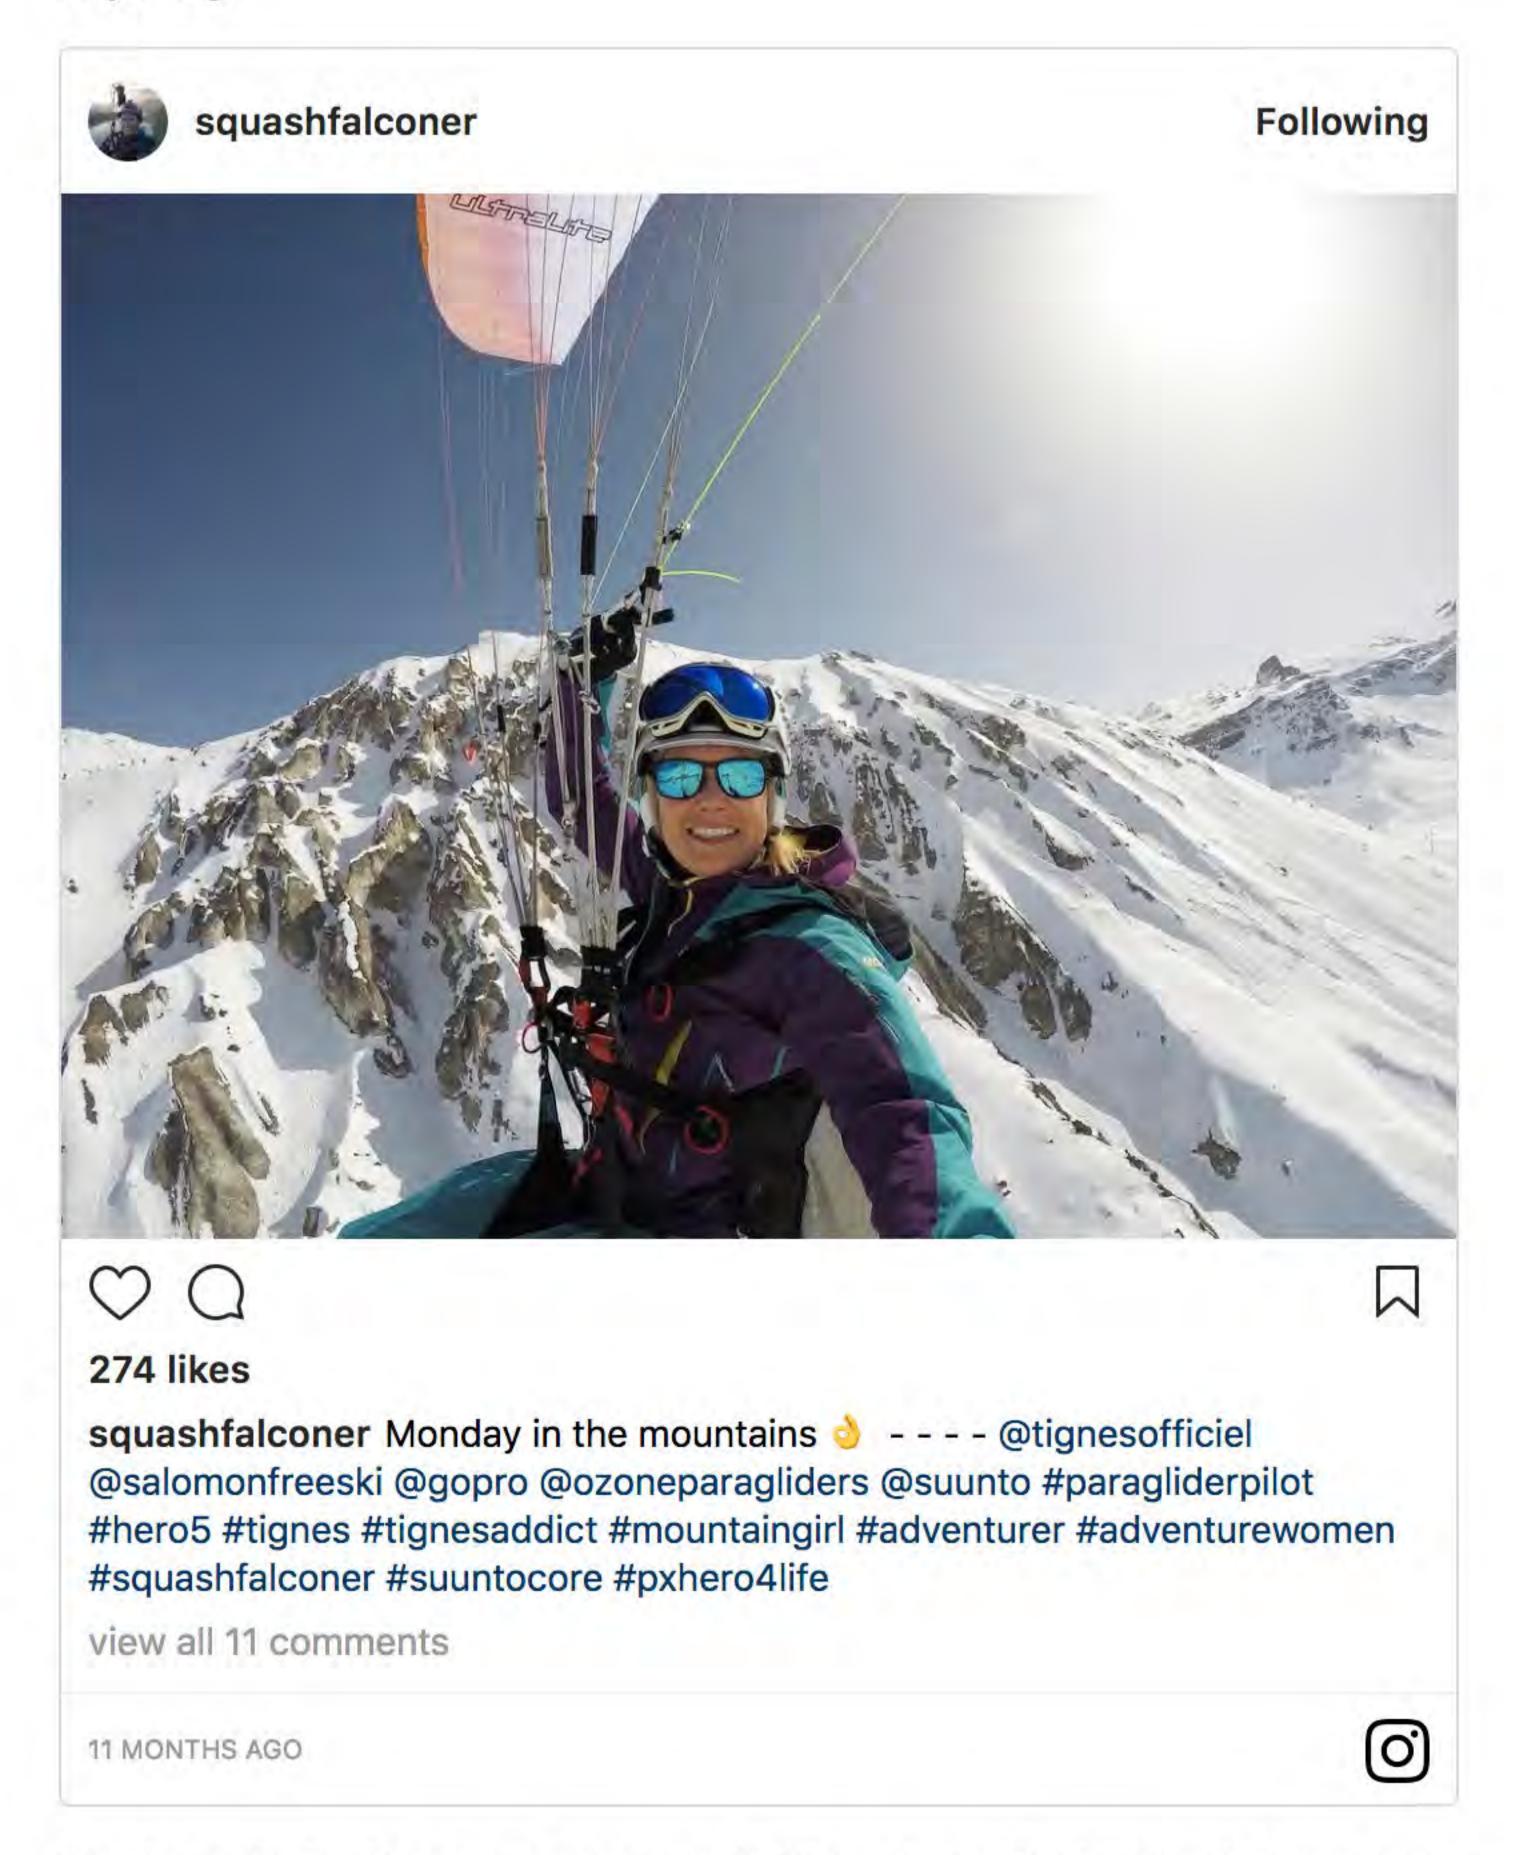

"I get up early in the morning before the lifts open because she's very enthusiastic and she has a tendency to leap around and want to play with skiers and tear around after them," she said.

"It's quite intimidating for a lot of people and you can't sort of have a dog roaming around."

Squash may have to bring a set of gear with her on their adventures, but Islys is perfectly equipped with her woolly coat and long claws to grip the snow.

I went out for an early morning ski tour with the dog, Islys. Here's a short GoPro ? edit I made. It's worth watching to the end, there's a pretty funny outtake... she is a dog after all ??! Please share this post if you think your friends might like it too 🙂 Tignes Salomon Freeski Posted by Squash Falconer on Friday, December 29, 2017

"I do certain projects and things for sponsors and I work really hard on my social media," she said. "But I put a picture of the dog up and it just does better than anything!"

Most Read

This rescue dog gave birth to different coloured puppies and looks just as confused as everyone else

Viral news | Nov 3, 2017

Enhance Your Career &...

Institute of Directors

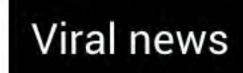

Advertising

YOUR NEW HOME IS WAITING FOR YOU Find out more at zeroc.co.uk/tailmill

She has climbed Mount Everest and Kilimanjaro, climbed and then flown a paraglider off Mont Blanc (the first British woman to do so) and motorcycled in Baja California, Mexico.

She makes her living from sponsorship and public speaking, inspiring others to seek out their adventurous sides.

HOME

ADVENTURE GEAR HOW TO... BLOG

INSPIRE ME FREE STUFF

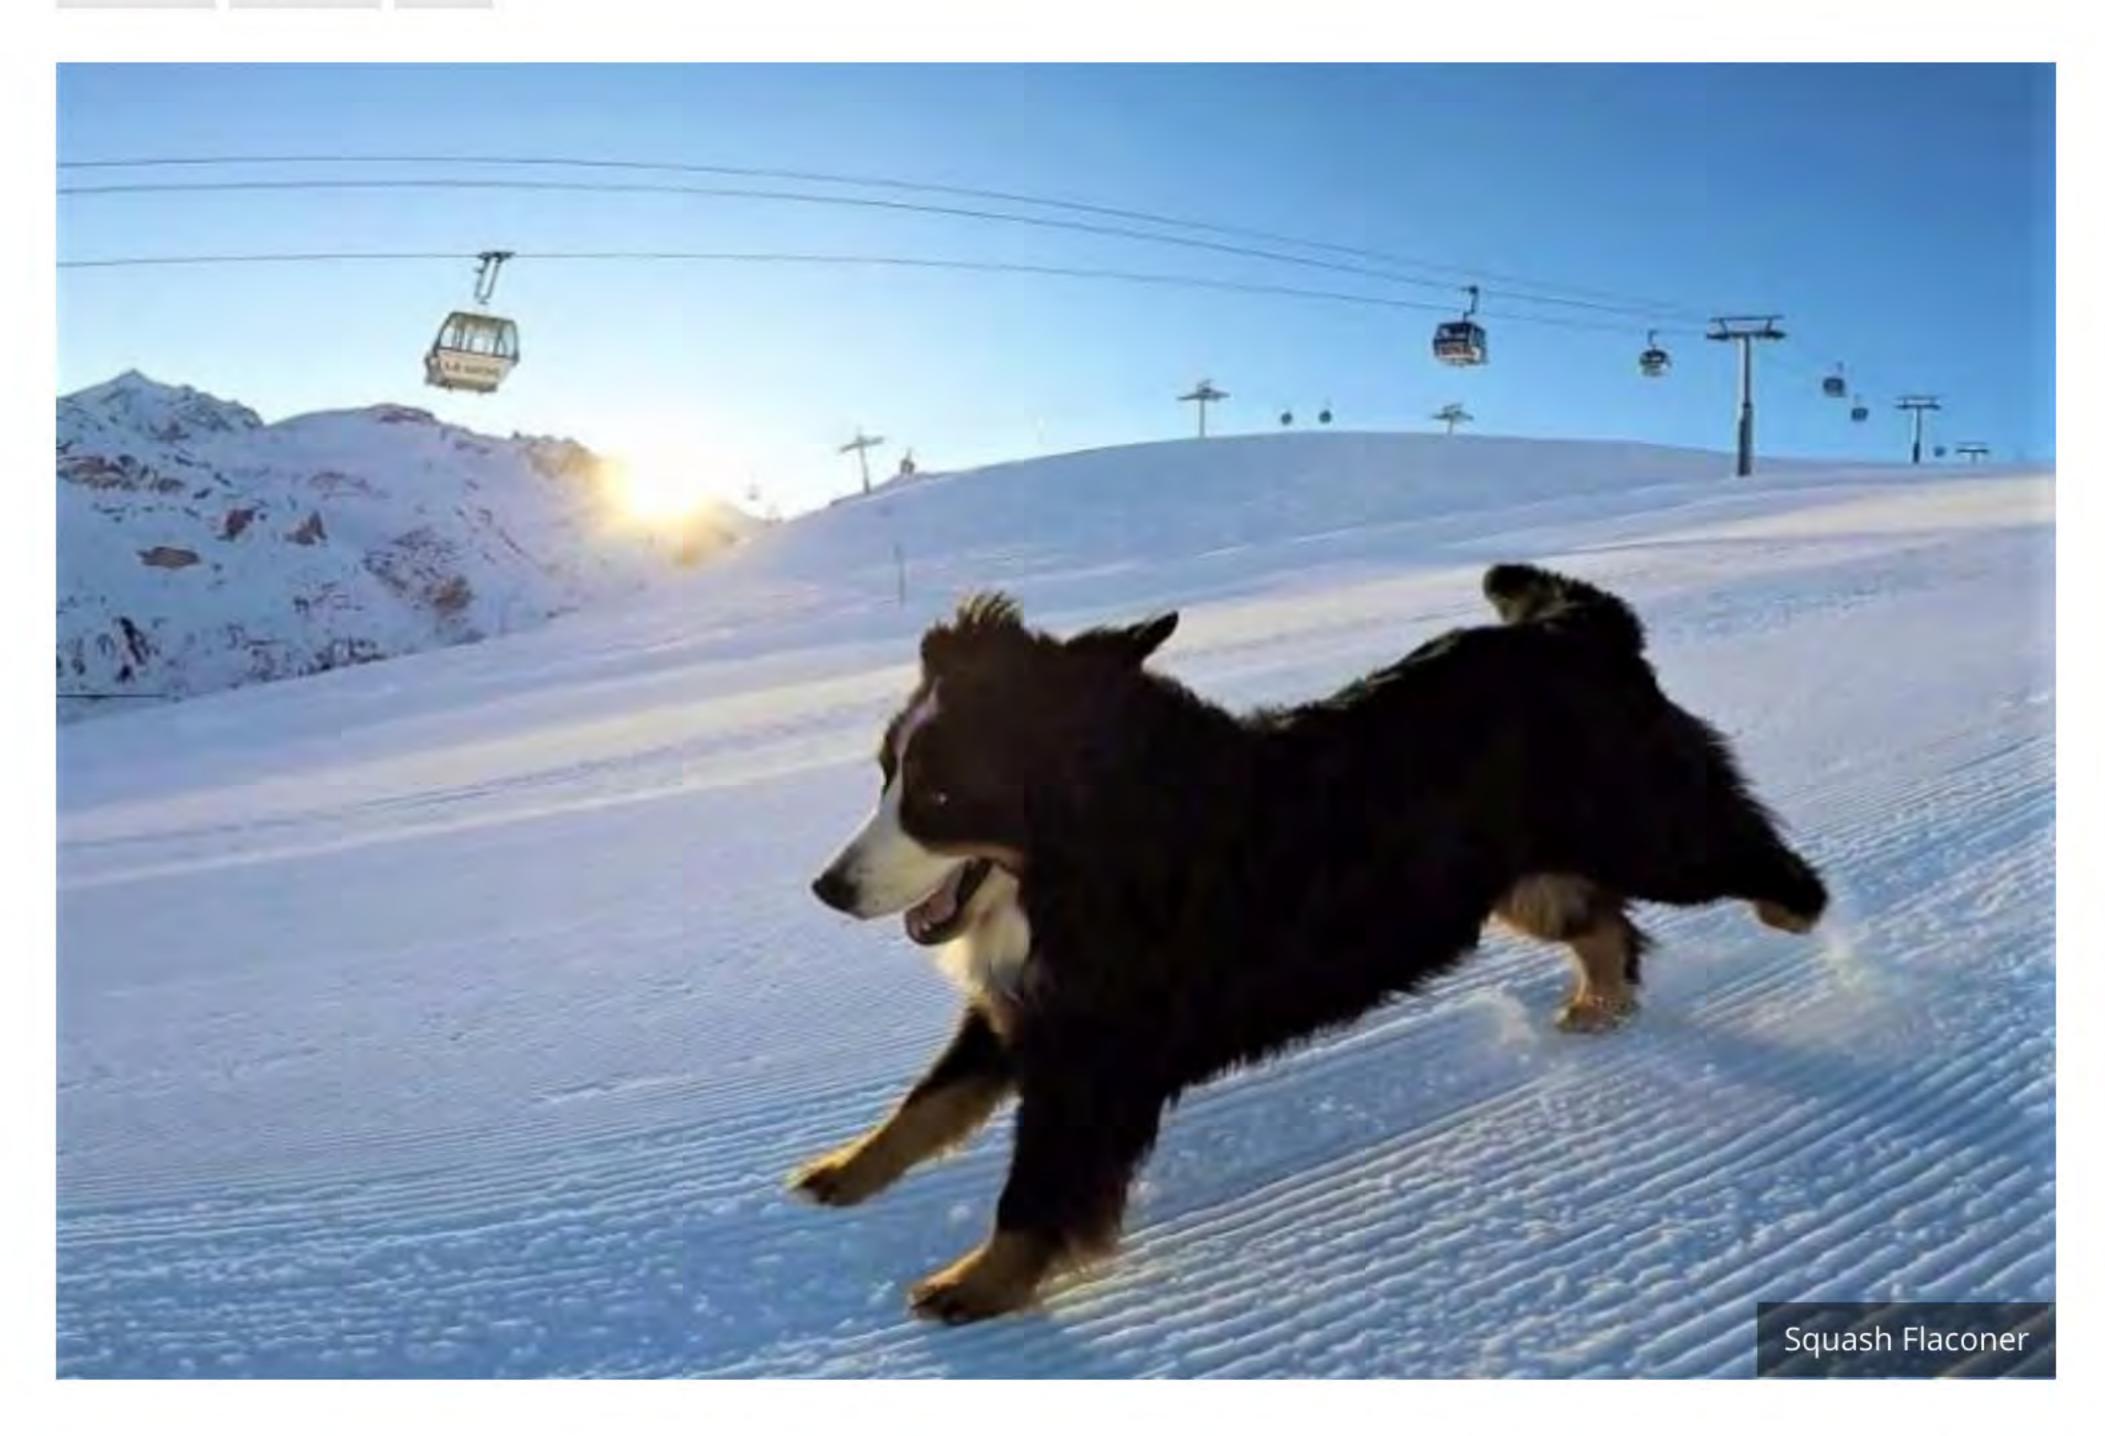

SHOP ABOUT

Home > Adventure

ADVENTURER SHARES MORNING SKI TRIPS WITH HER BERNESE MOUNTAIN DOG

1ST FEBRUARY 2018

ADVENTURE INSPIRE M

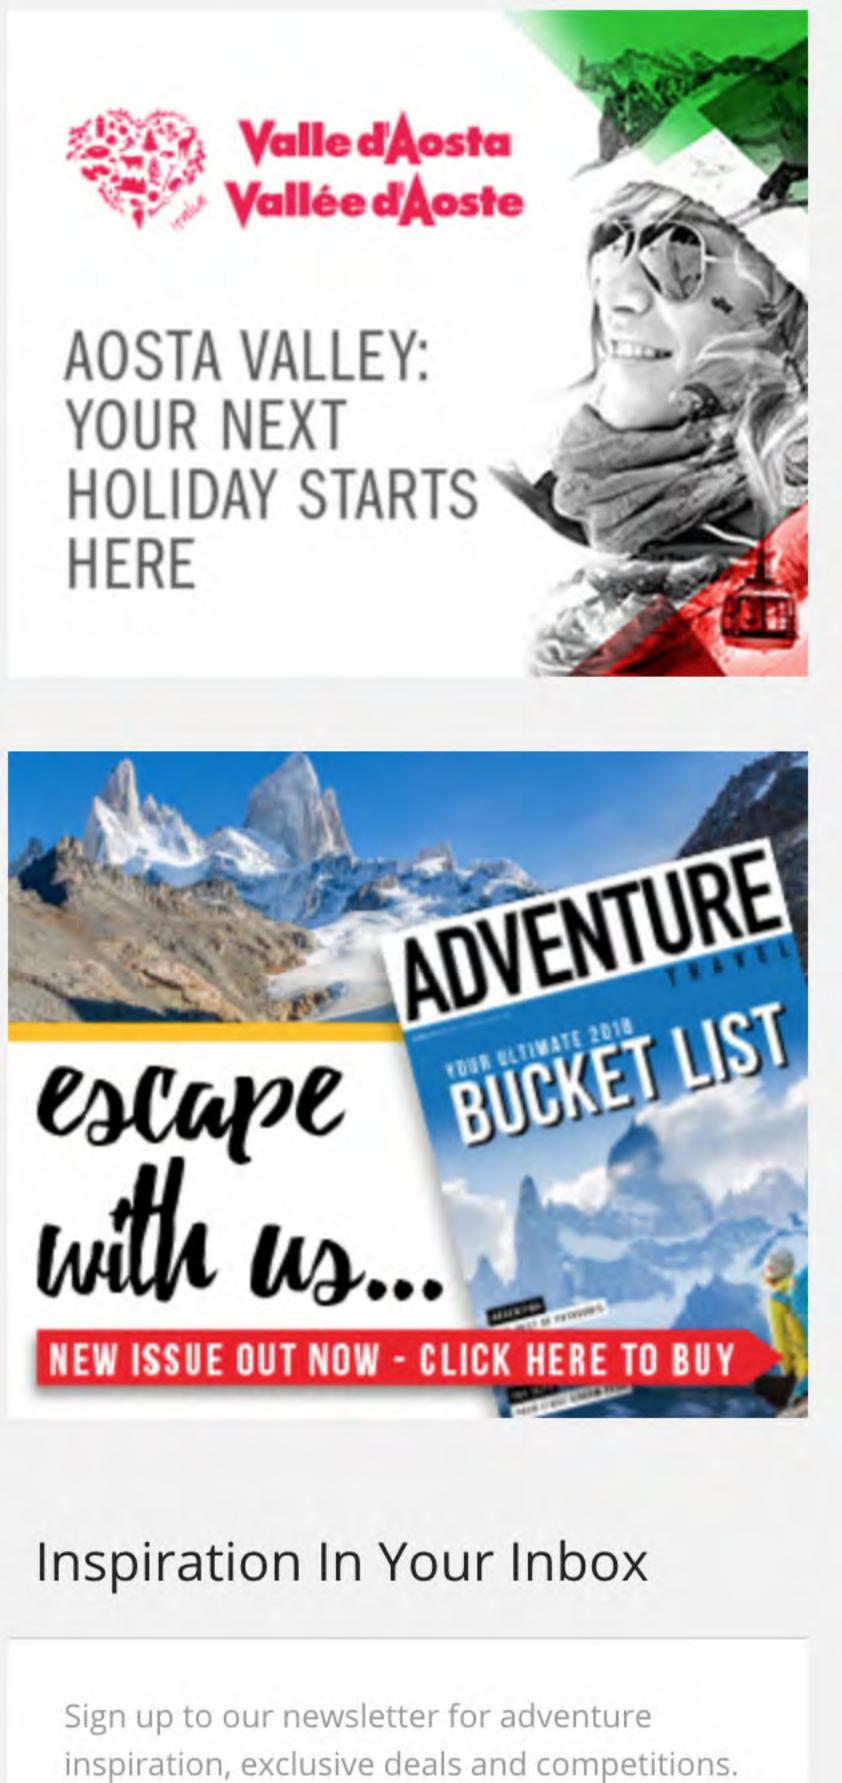

AUTHOR: NAOMI DUNBAR

Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in the French Alps with her friend, a Bernese mountain dog named Islys, who barks every morning outside of Squash's front door to let her know that she is ready to go for her morning skiing adventure.

Although she has a very friendly character, Squash understands that some skiers may not welcome Islys' presence on the slopes, therefore, the pair set off incredibly early each morning to avoid the crowds. The adventurous twosome hike up the pistes, to around 600m above sea level, and then that's when the all the fun really begins.

First Name

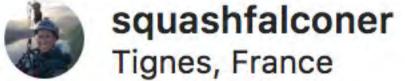

Last Name

Email

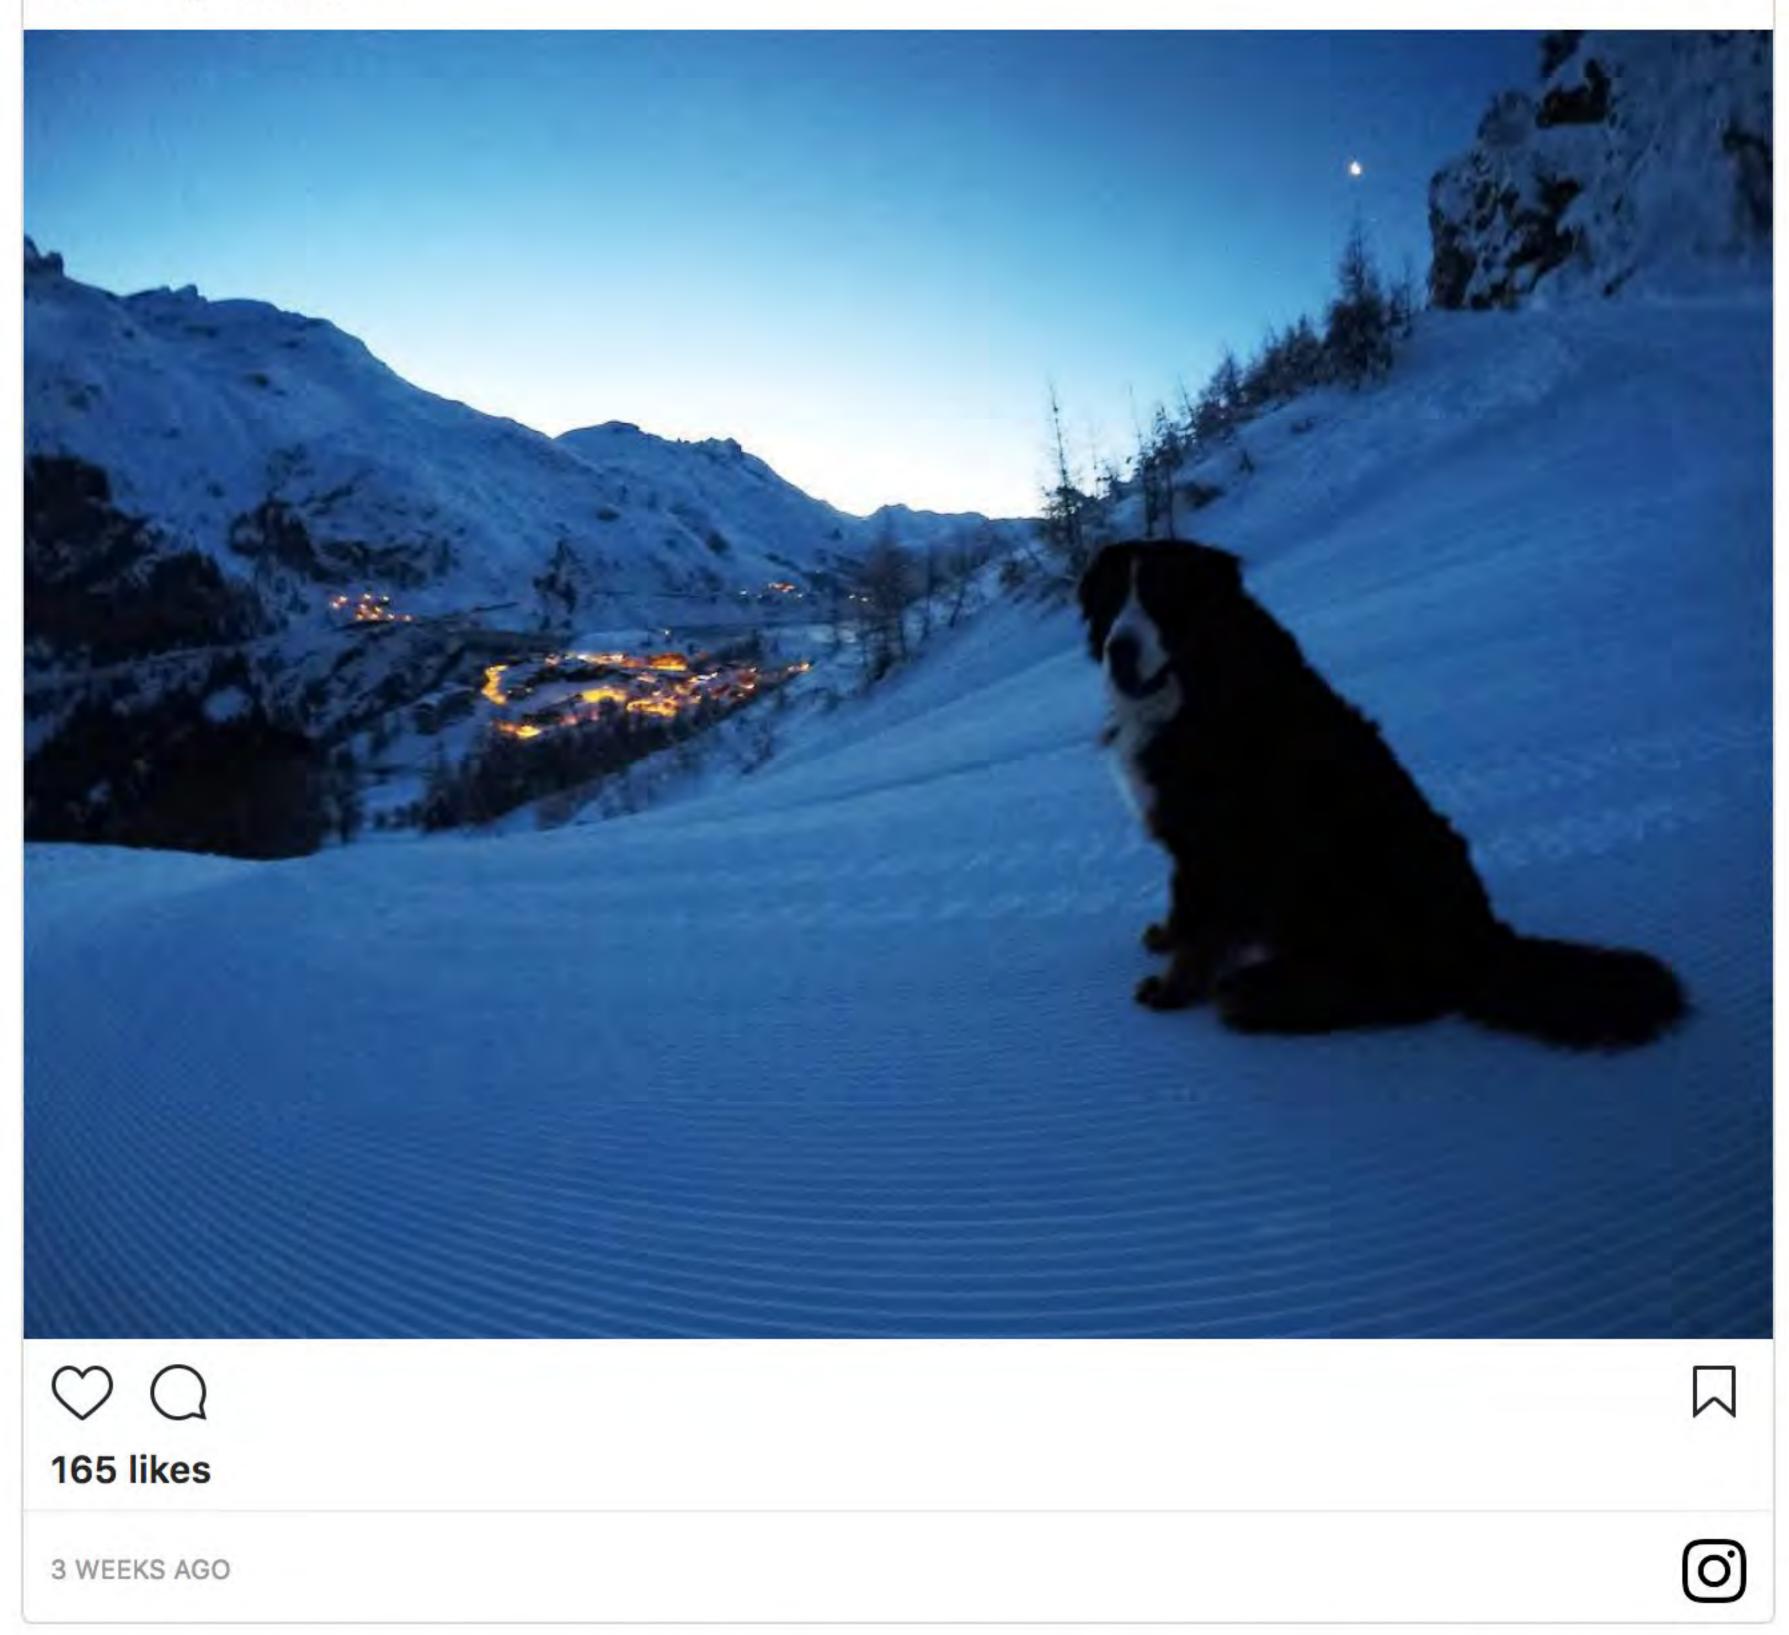

Submit

Follow us on Social Media

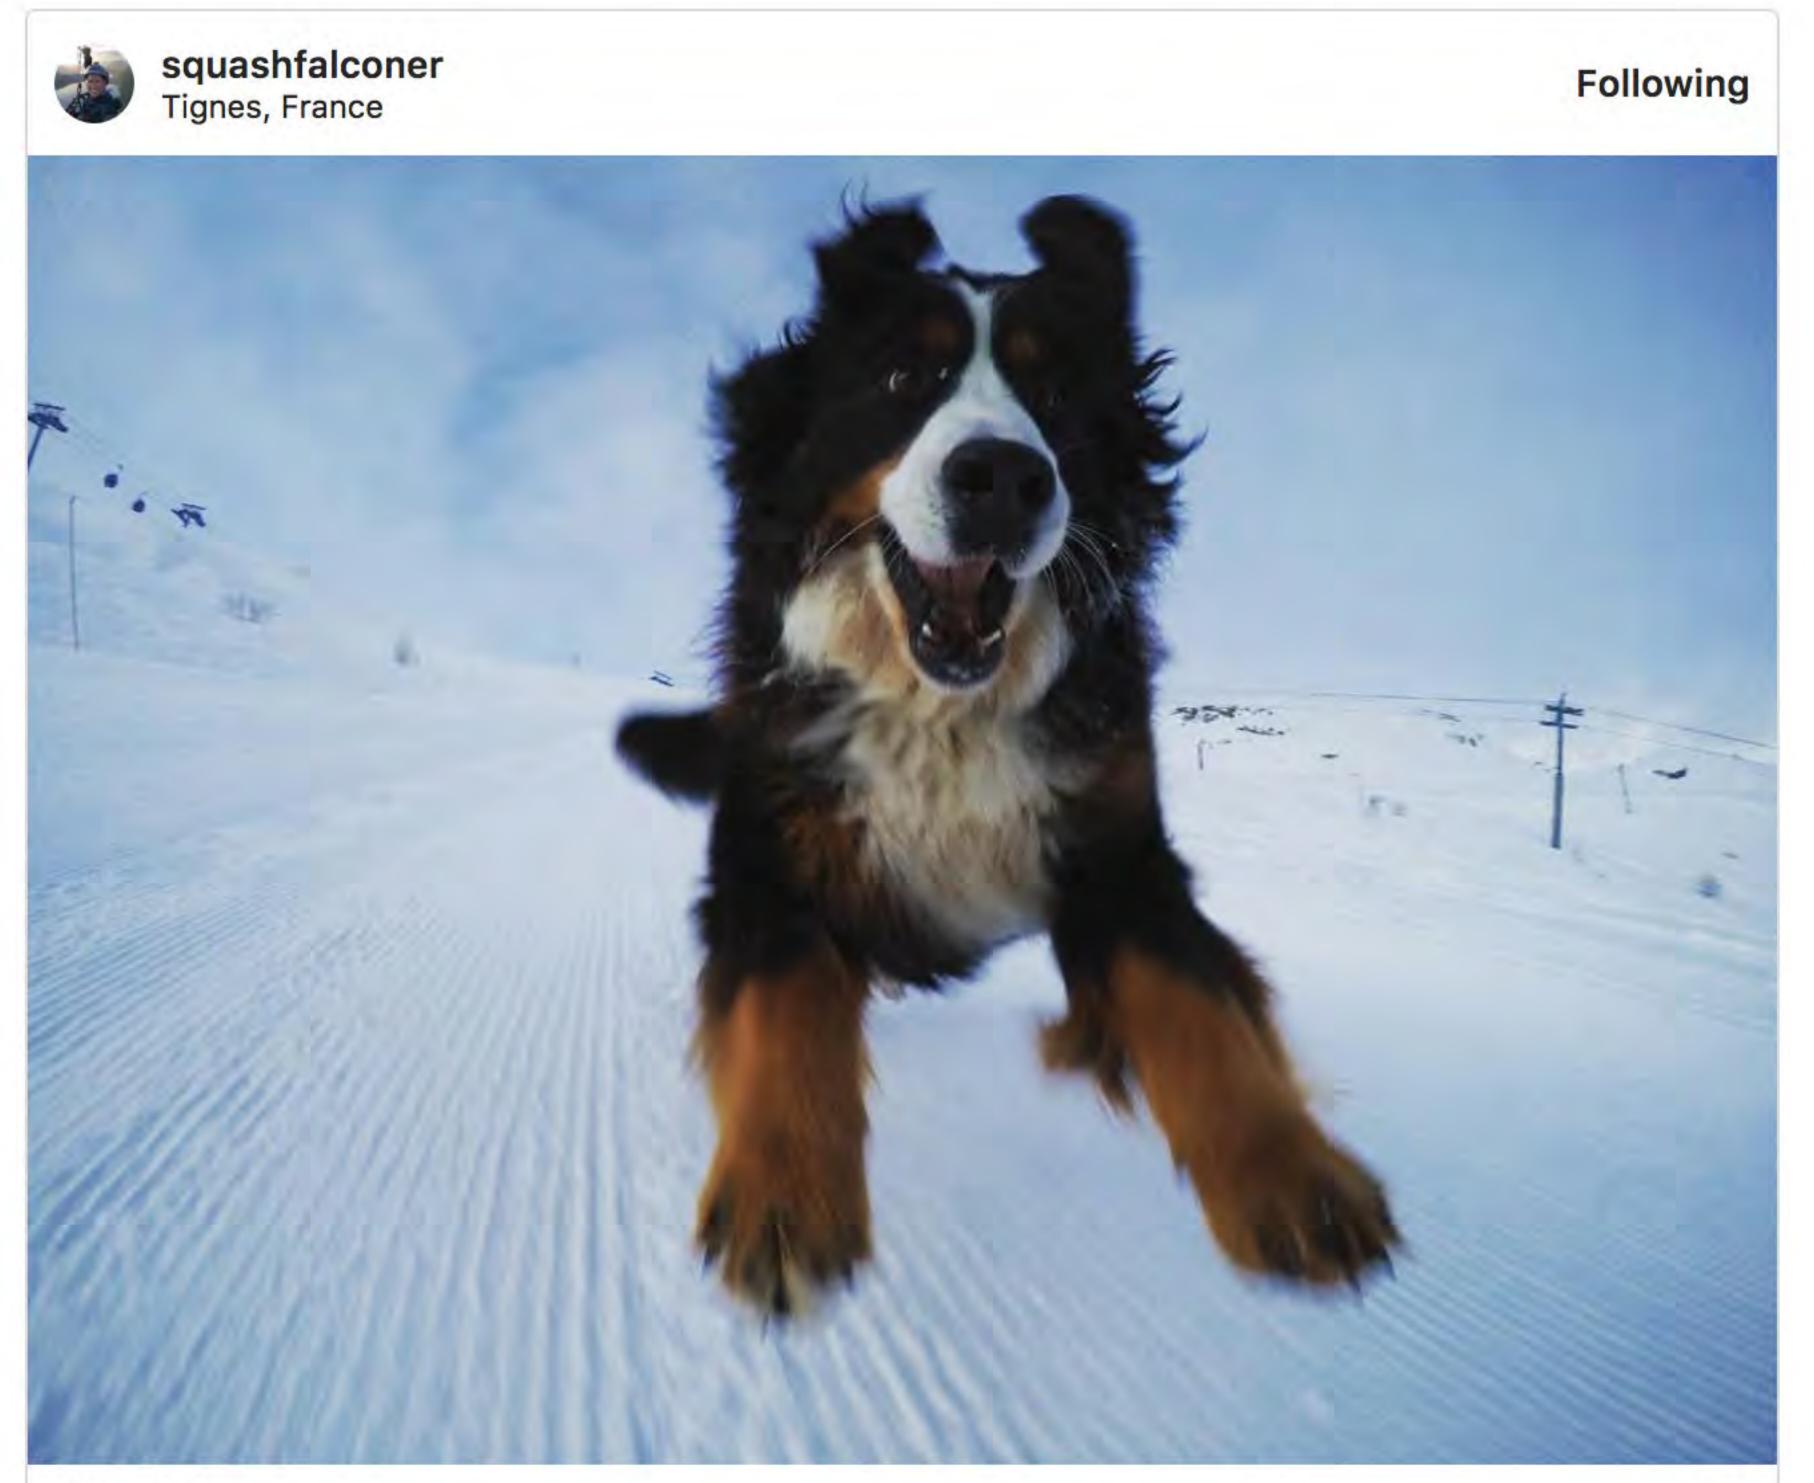

Following

Islys waits in excitable anticipation while Squash sets up her skis, then the pair take to the pistes with swift speed. Perfectly equipped for the job, with a fluffy mountain coat and long claws, Islys has the time of her life chasing Squash and galloping all the way down the mountain behind her.

3 WEEKS AGO

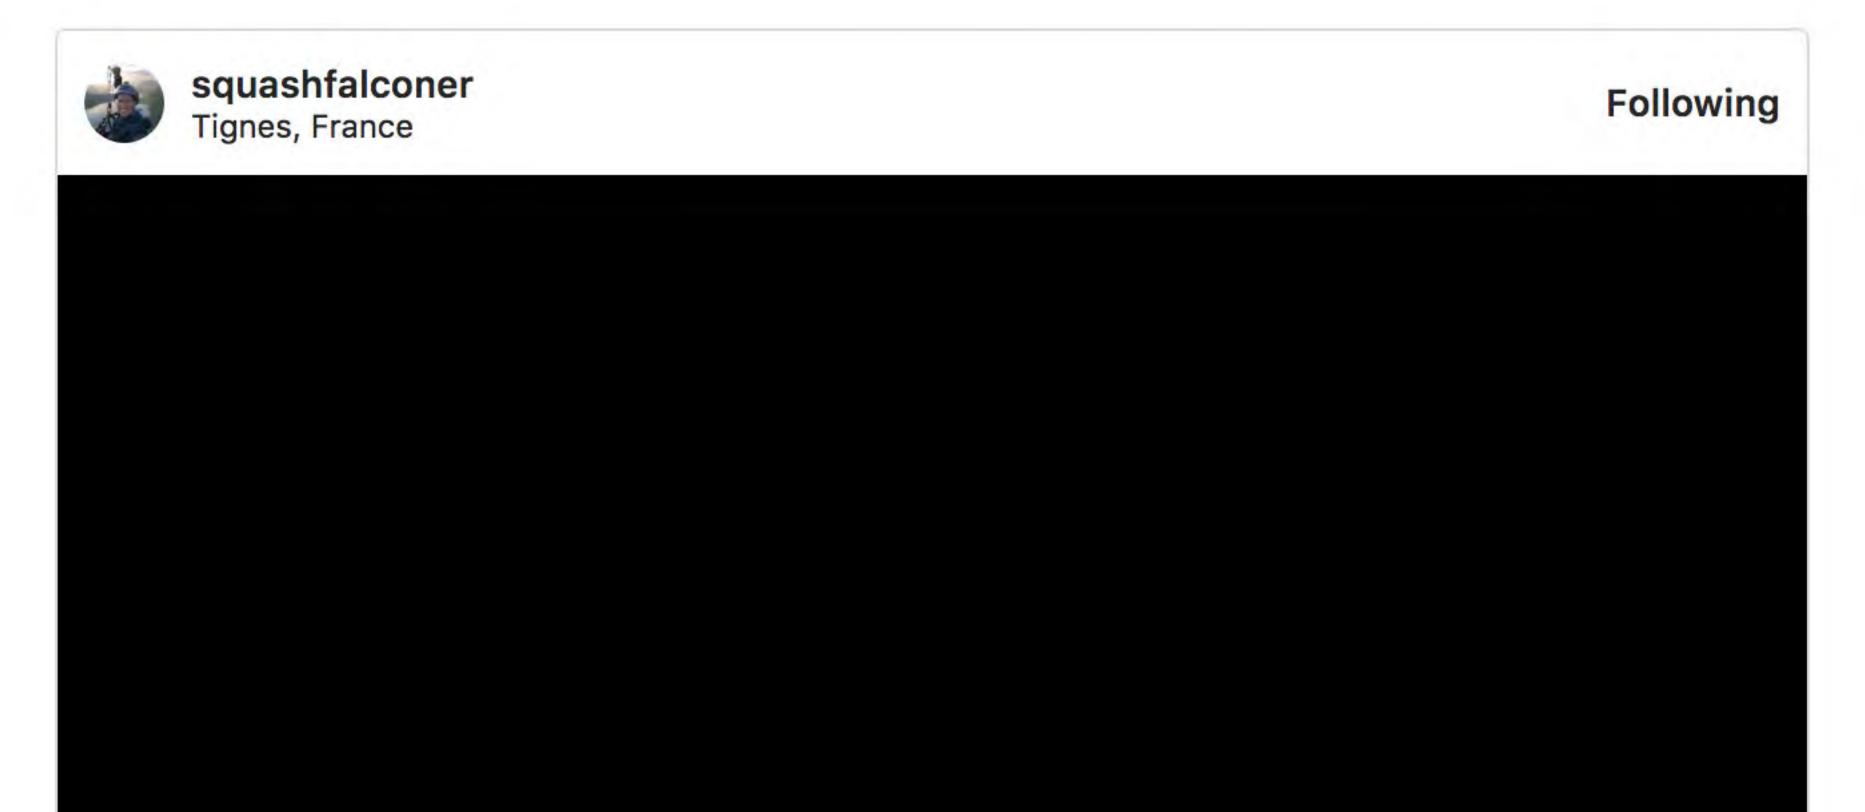

$\mathbf{\nabla}$
_

"I get up very early in the morning before the lifts open because she's very enthusiastic and she has a tendency to leap around and want to play with skiers and tear around after them," Squash said in a recent interview with the Independent. "It's quite intimidating for a lot of people and you can't sort of have a dog roaming around."

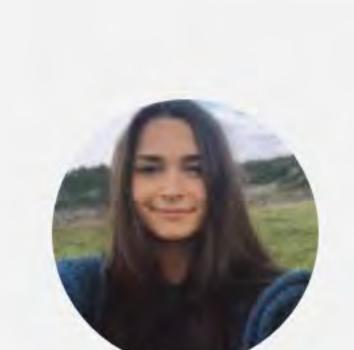

Squash, who has climbed the likes of Mount Everest, Kilimanjaro, and Mont Blanc, shares an array of inspiring videos and photos of her spectacular feats and adventures with Islys on her Facebook and Instagram pages. "I do certain projects and things for sponsors and I work really hard on my social media," she said. "But I put a picture of the dog up and it just does better than anything!"

You can check out the brilliant video of Squash and Islys heading out for a morning run on the pistes below.

\heartsuit \bigcirc
81 likes
1 WEEK AGO	0
f 😏 🖶 🛨 + 34

SKIING

VIDEO

FRENCH ALPS

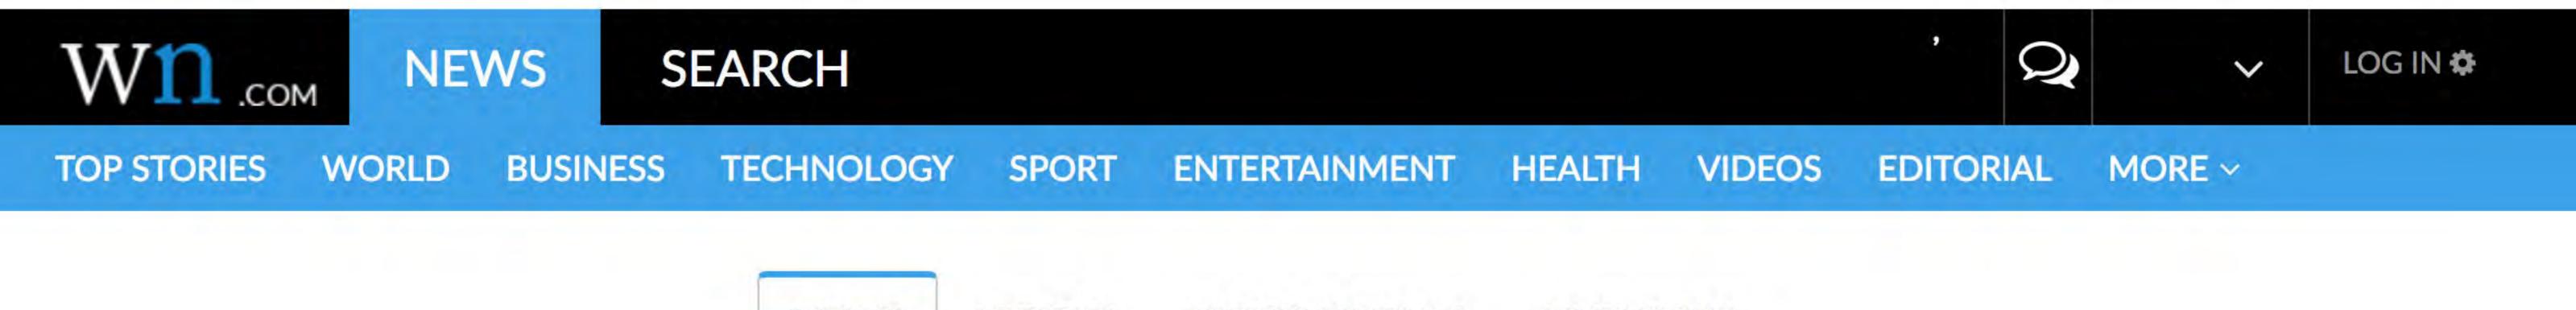

NAOMI DUNBAR EDITORIAL ASSISTANT

I have a passion for all things adventure and a bucket list that grows at an alarmingly faster rate than my bank balance. From wild camping in the unforgettable mountains of Norway to exploring the magical glacier caves of Iceland, I find no greater pleasure than finding new, weird and wonderful places to explore.

1 Comment		Sort by Newest -
	Add a comment
	Squash Falconer Thanks for the share!

Like · Reply · 1 · 4d

NEWS VIDEOS VIDEO DETAILS LIVE CHAT

Adventurer shares her morning ski trips with mountain dog

S Belfast Telegraph

SMS this page
 Email this page

Trending News

Donald Trump

Los Angeles Dodgers

Nintendo

Rodrigo Duterte

Related News

WII BY EMAIL *

Meet the professional adventurer who shares her morning ski trips with a Bernese mountain dog A skier and her mountain dog friend are delighting Facebook

Aichho	*	Aleppo
--------	---	--------	--

Report rights infringement developed with D YouTube

Like 133K

G+

Follow { 12.9K followers

European Central Bank

Skier and her mountain dog friend are delighting Facebook users with a video of their exploits on the slopes.

Read Full Article ⊿

Tweet t Post 0 + reddit this! Share Like 0 users with a video of their exploits on the slopes. Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in...

G+

IRISH INDEPENDENT 2018-01-31

Meet the professional adventurer who shares her morning ski trips with a Burmese mountain dog

A skier and her mountain dog friend are delighting Facebook users with a video of their exploits on the slopes. Squash Falconer is a professional adventurer who lives in...

IRISH INDEPENDENT 2018-01-31

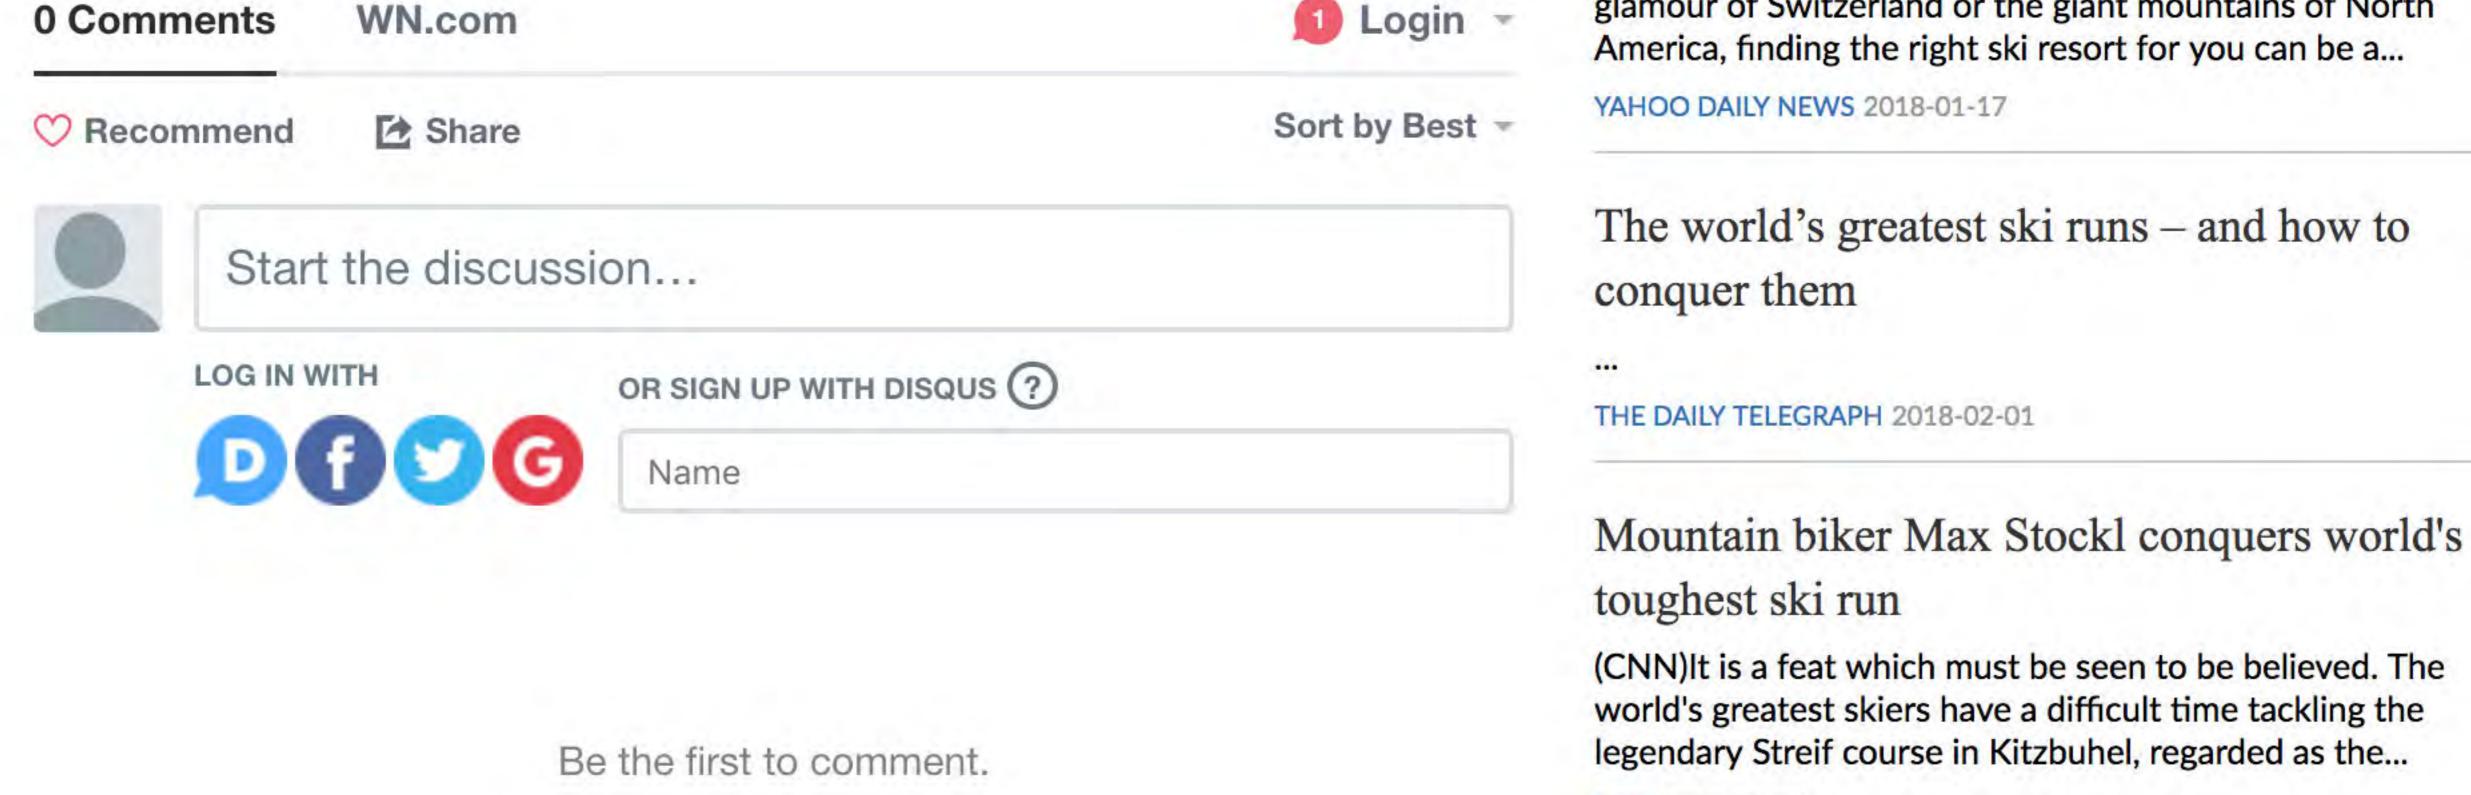

There is no ice between them! Chloe Green reunites with her beau Hot Felon Jeremy Meeks on the slopes for cosy skiing trip

She was pining for her beau when he filmed his very steamy fashion campaign in Russia in late January. So it's no surprise Chloe Green, 26, was delighted to be back in the...

THIS IS MONEY 2018-02-02

The secret to finding the perfect ski resort

Whether it's the variety of France, the charm of Austria, the glamour of Switzerland or the giant mountains of North

CNN 2018-01-29